Act One in Near East

By the Associated Press

Cairo, June 8.—British troops from Palestine, joined by Free French comrades in arms and paced by R. A. F. warplanes, early today invaded Syria, the territory of Britain's old ally, France.

Racing against growing Axis domination of that keystone wedge of country to save her position in the Middle East and Africa, Britain took the initiative in her boldest bid of the war, thereby precipitating a risk of conflict with the France of Marshal Petain.

Into the contest Britain threw the resources of diplomacy, politics and economics as well as military force, proclaiming along with the Free French a promise of Syrian liberation, independence and release from blockade if the invasion succeeds.

There was no official information how the action was proceeding or what reception the troops (estimated by Vichy at 20,000) were meeting. Operations were declared going smoothly, however.

R. A. F. Unopposed

The R. A. F. said it encountered no opposition whatever in heavy patrolling over the advancing troops.

A French communique said the Royal Navy was in the fight, and had landed a detachment of troops on the Lebanon coast. All were quickly captured, the French added.

Beirut was bombed twice and two oil reservoirs there were set afire. Airfields at Mezze, near Damascus, Nerab and Rayak also were bombed, the French communique said. Three British planes were declared shot down.

A Vichy announcement said large motorized and mechanized detachments, supported by artillery, attacked all along the line throughout the day but were resisted brilliantly by the French forces—estimated by the British to number 45,000.

The British were understood to be advancing along two routes, one along the coast toward Beirut, the capital of Lebanon, and the other through the rebel Arab territory of

British Launch Assault on Syria

British and Free French troops launched a land, sea and air attack yesterday on Vichy-mandated Syria. The land drive appeared to be a pincer aimed at Damascus (1). A naval squadron pounded the coast south of Beirut (2). Planes attacked Beirut, the Mezze airport and other fields. German technicians were reported preparing airfields at Latakia (3) and at two other north Syrian coastal points.

French African Area Reported Set to Secede

Weygand, Declared At Odds With Vichy, May Order Action

By Daniel T. Brigham
Copyright by New York Times

Bern, Switzerland, June 8.—The possibility of outright secession—or its equivalent—by the French North African possessions under Gen. Weygand from the control of the Vichy government over a question of policy in the Syrian affair was seen in some diplomatic quarters here tonight as imminent unless the Vichy government accedes to Gen. Weygand's urgent stipulation that no further French troops are to be sent to Syria from either the metropolitan or the colonial areas.

Should such a step be taken, however, it is believed there would be no question of the seceded "union" becoming involved in the conflict through joining the De Gaullist or British forces. It would, however, be prepared to actively defend itself by all means at its disposal against any attempt either toward the use of its naval, military and air bases by either belligerent, or any attempt by Vichy to reconquer it—probably through fleet action—and reassume the administration.

Thus, the break between Vice Premier Admiral Francois Darlan and General Weygand over a question of interpretation of national honor and absolute neutrality, promised the British by Marshal Petain, before the armistice was concluded at Compeigne, seems to be widening to a dangerous degree, and developments can be ex-

New Device Held U-Boat Nemesis

Attack on Sub By U. S. Ship Reported

Destroyer Said To Have Dropped Depth Bombs; 2d Encounter Revealed

By Joseph Alsop and Robert Kintner

Nothing better illustrates the strangely equivocal position in which present war policy places this country than the undisclosed episodes of the Atlantic patrol. In one case, rather more than a month ago, an encounter between German and American warcraft at sea very nearly terminated in an attack by the Germans. In another, slightly more recent, an attack on what was believed to be a German submarine was actually made by an American destroyer.

No details of the first episode are available, but the basic facts of the second are known. The destroyer, the name of which cannot be ascertained, was picking up survivors from a British vessel sunk not far from the coast of Greenland. While the operation was in progress the destroyer's detecting advice announced the approach of a submarine. The submarine could only have been German. It was virtually certain to use its torpedoes, as semi-darkness concealed the nationality of the American ship. And the commander of the destroyer accordingly dropped three depth charges.

Shooting Already

Thus, although the President is waiting for the Germans to shoot first, the truth is that there has been shooting already. The truth may be denied—indeed, it is likely to be. The outcome of the episode is a mystery, since the light was too poor for the commander of the destroyer to make certain that the submarine really was nearby, or to guess whether the depth charges had taken effect. But official denials cannot alter either the episode's basic facts, or its broad meaning.

The episode's meaning is pretty obvious. The Atlantic patrol in itself is not effective. Even now it has not been extended to cover the most dangerous waters, yet four British ships have recently been sunk in the part of the ocean it supposedly guards. The President, all his most important advisers, and the War and Navy Departments hope, however, that the patrol will produce an incident to serve as the pretext for really effective action by this country. The interest of the Germans is to avoid such an incident. It is perfectly possible that the submarine was in fact sunk, and that the Germans have suppressed all public complaint in order to keep public opinion here in its present lulled condition. Nevertheless, as the episode described above pretty clearly demonstrates the chances are strong that an incident will eventually occur.

Time Is Short

The trouble with that is the word "eventually." The time is now desperately short. In his desire for a pretext for the action the President wants to take and knows he must take, he is wasting days and weeks that may forever alter the balance of the war.

The Navy, as has been stated before in this space, is fully ready to act. Possibly measures may soon be taken to solve the minor aspects of the Atlantic problem. It is far from improbable that the preventive occupation of the Azores and the Cape Verdes, or the garrisoning of Iceland, will be ordered in the near future. But among the men who should know the President's intentions if any one does the prevailing opinion still is that all-out shipping protection will not be instituted for some time, unless an incident occurs, even though

Senate and House Will Vote Today On Bills to End Defense Tie-ups

The President, administrative agencies and both houses of Congress today will be engaged in various steps toward combatting the current series of strikes that have created or threatened serious stoppages in delivery of defense arms.

Aside from the hard-locked North American Aviation Co. stoppage, the Capital's labor interest was to be centered today on these activities:

1. President Roosevelt was to confer with Harvey W. Brown, president of the A. F. of L.'s International Association of Machinists, whom he summoned here to discuss the machinist strike against 11 San Francisco Bay shipyards, engaged on work for the Navy.

2. Secretary of Labor Perkins yesterday summoned here today the disputants in a week-old strike of A. F. L. teamsters and truckers in the Pittsburgh Arsenal area. Negotiations at Pittsburgh to settle the dispute collapsed yesterday.

Starnes Rider Up

3. The Senate was slated to vote today on an amendment to the Selective Service Act to permit the Government to take over and operate plants where an "existing or threatened failure" of production impedes or threatens to impede the defense program.

4. House leaders, at the same time, were to try to defeat a proposal by Representative Starnes (Democrat), of Alabama, to write into the pending War Department supply bill a restriction on paying any of the money appropriated to workers who have been on strike for ten days or more and barring such workers from future defense employment.

5. Representative Vinson (Democrat), of Georgia, said he would notify the House that his "cooling-off" bill to require a waiting period before strikes can be ordered into effect will be called up a week from today.

6. The National Defense Mediation Board has set a deadline for 6 p. m. today for word from Northern and Southern soft coal operators and the United Mine Workers on whether they would accept the board's recommendations for ending the long dispute in that industry. The board had recommended a straight $7 a day basic wage, which had been accepted by the Northern operators and the union but rejected by the Southern operators.

Vote Delayed Friday

Representative Vinson declared yesterday that he would insist on action on his measure irrespective of developments this week in the current series of strikes.

"The country demands action by Congress," he asserted. "We are in a national emergency and we must curtail strikes that menace our efforts to arm."

Vinson has deleted from his original bill a provision to "freeze" existing situations as to open or closed shops in defense plants.

STRIKERS AT NORTH American Aviation Co.'s plant refused to return to work today, despite President Roosevelt's warning that the Government otherwise would take over the plant, but they said they would conduct a mail ballot on returning.

PRESIDENT ROOSEVELT was to confer today with Harvey W. Brown, head of the A. F. L. machinists' union on the strike against 11 shipbuilding plants in the San Francisco area.

NEGOTIATIONS TO END the week-old Pittsburgh strike of A. F. L. teamsters and truckers collapsed.

THE HOUSE WAS SET to vote today on an antistrike amendment to the Army supply bill.

SENATORS WERE TO BE asked for quick passage of legislation to permit the Government to take over defense plans.

Fire Destroys $1,000,000 Defense Plant

Blaze of 'Suspicious' Origin in Factory At Wheeling, W. Va.

By the United Press

Wheeling, W. Va., June 8.—A five-hour fire of "suspicious" origin in the Wheeling Machine Products Co. plant today caused an estimated $1,000,000 damage to property and highly specialized machinery used in producing munition components and other national defense orders.

E. W. Krause, president of the firm, said approximately 70 per cent of the plant's output was of "national defense nature."

"The cause of that fire looks very suspicious," Krause said, as fire and insurance investigators began probing the ruins in an effort to learn the origin of the blaze.

"All company records and some almost irreplaceable machines and tools were destroyed," he said. "It is impossible to estimate total damages, but the building and machinery alone were worth at least $1,000,000.

Krause said the watchman discovered the fire while making his "rounds." The plant, closed on Sunday, had been working 24 hours daily, six days a week. It employs about 300.

Plant officials declined to specify what types of defense orders the company was producing other than special fabricating tools for Pittsburgh and Youngstown District steel mills. It was reported, however, that the company recently had received an order for large quantities of artillery shell casings, the basis of which was a projected plant

Roosevelt Due To Order Army To Take Over Factory Today

Striking C. I. O. workers at the North American Aviation Co. plant yesterday refused to return to work today as President Roosevelt had demanded, and last night all officers of the striking local union were suspended by Richard T. Frankensteen, head of the C. I. O.-U. A. W. aviation division.

Also suspended were Frankensteen's assistant, Wyndham Mortimer; three international organizers, John Orr, sr., Stanford Douglas and Aruthur Kearns, and John Orr, jr., publicity director for the union.

This quick, forceful action was taken while two motorized battalions of Infantry were moving into southern California from Camp Hunter Liggett, Calif., on orders of the commanding officer of the Ninth Corps Area, with every indication that they were to take charge of the plant at Inglewood, Calif., this morning, as President Roosevelt had warned.

President Roosevelt was expected to sign this morning the executive order for the Army to take control of the factory unless there should be a last-minute development permitting resumption of operations.

Suspension of the union officials followed a boisterous mass meeting of some 3,000 strikers in a field near the plant, at which union officers told the strikers there was no provision in the bylaws for a vote to be taken at such a meeting, but failed to take any action for a mail ballot, such as the bylaws legalize on the question of returning to work.

Big Picket Line Expected

At the same time the mass meeting adopted resolutions, the United Press reported, saying they are "determined to hold our picket lines solid until we win our 75-cents-an-hour minimum and a 10-cent raise per hour for experienced workers." It said further that "we heartily condemn the union-busting activities of Mr. Frankensteen and call upon all other workers and officials of the U. A. W., as well as of the C. I. O., to take a similar stand."

Today was forecast as "the big test" by a union spokesman, who told the Associated Press the union would have a big picket line, "and the Army will probably be there too."

Mayor Fletcher Bowron, of Los Angeles, at the same time told the United Press that police would keep the factory gates open "if it takes 1,000 officers."

Frankensteen urged the workers to go back, saying they would not be strikebreaking.

Roosevelt Action Awaited

Frankensteen had been booed and heckled at the meeting when he attempted to deliver an appeal from Philip Murray, C. I. O. president, that the strikers return to work in compliance with their promise that there would be no walkout while the National Defense Mediation Board was considering their dispute with the company. The strike was called suddenly last Thursday while mediation board negotiations were in progress here.

The suspensions appeared to be part of a drive, reported in The Post Saturday to have been determined on by national heads of the C. I. O. and A. F. of L. and by the OPM, mediation board and other

Wife Burned On Yacht, Man Collapses, Dies

Heart Attack Fatal To Realty Dealer; Gas Fumes Blamed

J. Floyd Cissel, 53, prominent Washington real estate operator, died suddenly of a heart attack at Emergency Hospital yesterday after he had accompanied his severely burned wife there from the blazing deck of a friend's yacht on the Potomac River.

Mr. and Mrs. Cissel were guests of George N. Ray, real estate operator, of 1302 Eighteenth Street, aboard his 75-foot cruiser, Navajo. The yacht was about to put out down the river for a short pleasure cruise from the Corinthean Yacht Club, Ray said, when fire burst suddenly from the stern.

Mrs. Cissel, ran screaming from a women's room with her clothing ablaze. Fourth Precinct police rushed her, accompanied by her husband, to Emergency Hospital, where she was treated for first, second and third degree burns about the face, arms and legs.

On their arrival at the hospital Dr. W. C. Gordon advised Cissel, who was overwrought, to allow himself to be admitted to the hospital with his wife, although he was uninjured by the fire. He died shortly afterward. He had previously been under medical attention for a cardiac ailment.

While Mrs. Cissel was using one of the pieces of electrical equipment in the ladies' room a spark was set off which ignited fumes from the gasoline tank, police said in their version of the cause of the fire.

The Navajo carried 900 gallons

Youth, 16, Tossed From Rumble Seat In Crash at Avery

Thomas Conway Burriss, 16, of Rockville, Md., the son of C. Earl Burriss, died yesterday in Georgetown Hospital of internal injuries suffered when he was thrown from the rumble-seat of an auto Saturday.

Burriss was thrown out when the auto, which police believe was operated by a 17-year-old youth, crashed into a tree on a dirt road near Avery, outside Rockville.

Earl Crismond, 31, of Marbury, Md., was, in Providence Hospital last night after his arm had been torn off in an accident in Marbury. Maryland State Police charged the driver of a truck which was in collision with Crismond's auto, George Wassman, 1430 B Street Southeast, with reckless driving.

Twelve-year-old Paul Rothgeb, of 641 Kenyon Street Northwest, was in a serious condition in Garfield Hospital last night after he was struck while crossing the street in the 3200 block of Georgia Avenue Northwest.

Five persons escaped with ducklings yesterday when boats capsized in the Potomac River. Richard Daley, 3155 Jocelyn Street, and James Livesay, 1347 East Capitol Street, and William Walker, 504 Fourth Street Southeast, were towed ashore in their 20-foot boat by Harbor Police after it capsized off Hains Point.

While sailing in a Colonial Yacht Club race, Lowell Palmer, 19, 1900 F Street Northwest, and Richard Combs, 13, 622 H Street Southwest, capsized in their 13-foot catboat.

Seven Children Feel Father Merits Typical Dad Award

According to the Merritt system, Washington's typical father will be found at 806 First Street Northwest.

There are seven reasons for that selection. They are Doris, Eva, Mercedes, Edward, Robert, Katherine and Yvonne. Theirs is a joint letter nominating their father, Edward F., as the tops of the town.

"He is happy with his family," they say "whether he is dancing with the big girls, boxing with the boys, or romping on the floor with the baby.

"On Sunday he is delighted to get to Sunday School with the children while mother stays back to prepare for church where he and the eldest daughter sing in the church choir.

"Our dad can sew, wash, iron and cook a little. He is just an all around good father and husband."

It's only a matter of days now until the Merritts will know whether the head of the house has been victorious in The Post contest to find Washington's typical father. The announcement will be made on Friday.

There is still time to send in your nomination, if you have not done so. Just write the Father's Day Editor, telling him who deserves the laurels, in your opinion, and explain why. Letters must be postmarked before tomorrow midnight.

Nutrition Committee to Scan Milk Distribution Setup Today

What is the possibility of extending 5-cent milk to more undernourished mothers and children in the District?

How can its distribution be improved?

What is the possibility of a 1-cent milk program in the District public schools for needy children?

These are among questions to which decisive answers are expected today when the District Nutrition Committee holds an important luncheon meeting at noon at the Y. W. C. A., Seventeenth and K Streets Northwest.

The problem of bringing low-cost surplus milk to needy Washingtonians will be thoroughly canvassed, members of the committee said yesterday.

Greater coordination between the Surplus Marketing Administration and the District Board of Public Welfare is expected to be one result of today's meeting.

The gathering also will mark another forward step beyond the committee's last meeting, May 20, when a resolution was adopted urging that low cost surplus milk be brought within reach of far more Washington needy than are now permitted to buy it.

At that meeting it was pointed out:

That the present system of 5-cents-

Coast Strikers Refuse to Go Back to Work

Government agencies, to oust alleged radicals from control of unions conducting three bitter strikes on the West Coast, all of them repudiated by national union officers.

Frankensteen's action was taken, the Associated Press reported from Inglewood, under authority of the C. I. O.'s national executive board, further evidence of the joint undertaking to clear out the leadership, if necessary, in the strikes at North American Aviation, at the 11 shipbuilding yards in the San Francisco area, and in the Northwest lumber industry, in all of which local union leaders have defied calls by their national leaders and by Government agencies to return to work.

Significant in this connection also was a message of commendation which the Associated Press said had been sent to the striking aircraft workers by O. M. Orton, president of the International Woodworkers of America, who, as leader of the lumber workers strike, has been denounced by C. I. O. national leaders and Government officials.

The message as released by Orton, the Associated Press said, told the North American strikers that "decisive, militant and aggressive action on your part in this regard will be an inspiration to all workers who are fighting against the employers for a real national defense . . . We are united with you in maintaining the American democratic way of life."

Harry Bridges, head of the Longshoremen and Warehousemen's Union on the Pacific Coast, the United Press reported, telegraphed the support of his organization and that of the State C. I. O. to the strikers, a development that was reported to have greatly cheered strike leaders.

The Government's determination to get work resumed at once on the $200,000,000 worth of airplane contracts which the North American company holds was said to make it certain that any stern action necessary will be taken.

Old Hands Aroused

While Attorney General Jackson has given the President, it is understood, a report on all his legal powers in the matter, immediate strategy was said to be based on conviction that vital skilled workers at the plant are ready to resume work whenever the Army takes charge.

Informed sources here declare that the slender C. I. O. majority in the plant, by virtue of which the C. I. O. won the collective bargaining election there, is composed of young, new and unskilled workers.

Skilled workers, largely members of the A. F. L., who have long been with the company, have conducted several demonstrations during the strike, insisting on reopening of the plant so they could return to work. It is the confident expectation of officials here that these workers will return, and that it will be possible to replace the younger, unskilled workers by the thousands.

Miss Perkins Wires

Early today Secretary of Labor Perkins called upon the strikers to return to work immediately. Her appeal was in the form of a telegram to Frankensteen to be read to the strikers in a radio address. She said:

"Millions of your fellow Americans in and out of the labor movement and the people of the United States expect you to return to work promptly.

"In times such as these we must all work together to our utmost and always put the needs of our country first."

Prior to yesterday's mass meeting, Elmer Freitag, chairman of the union local, in a telegram to Stephen T. Early, Presidential Secretary who had announced Mr. Roosevelt's decision to take control of the plant if necessary, declared:

"Bombers can't be built with bayonets, and we call upon the Government to vindicate the trust of its people. If the Army is used to help break our strike it will mean the armed forces of the United States will be subverted to class interests if they are used to help the accumulation of profits . . ."

The first three speakers to address the 6,000 strikers on an open field adjoining the airplane factory all opposed giving in to the Government's pleas and threats.

"We Can't Give Up Now"

David Simpson, member of the union's negotiation committee, opened the meeting and voiced the hope that the strikers would remain firm in their demands until they received the raises the union is seeking.

He was followed on the stand by Freitag, another member of the negotiating committee, who also drew a cheer from the strikers when he said "we can't give up now." Freitag declared, "we must hold fast until we gain a living wage from the company."

Walter Witanen charged that Frankensteen was "using the North American strike as a stepping stone in his campaign for high political ranking within the union." His statement was loudly cheered by the strikers.

Frankensteen, attempting to deliver the return-to-work please of Murray and R. J. Thomas, U.A.W. president, was booed and heckled while he spoke.

Making Hitler Happy

He told the gathering that "this is a wildcat strike" and said "your negotiating committee had no right to call you men off the job." He told them further:

"Adolf Hitler has been made the happiest man in the world by this strike."

The United Press reported that Frankensteen was given an escort of more than a dozen husky union men in getting to his automobile.

Strikers Disregard Appeal

Associated Press WIREPHOTO

IGNORE LEADER—Placards deriding him were displayed by strikers at a mass meeting yesterday as Richard T. Frankensteen, the C. I. O.'s national aviation director, appealed to them to return to their jobs at the North American Aviation Corporation plant

It reported that such cries as "we don't want rats like you around," and "you skunks from the East can't tell us what to do" were hurled at him by the strikers.

A skeleton crew of maintenance men were said to be rushing preparations to open the gates at 7 a. m., at the big plant which has been credited with producing one-fifth of the United States military aircraft.

Meanwhile J. H. Kindelberger, president of the North American company, who had been in Washington for mediation conferences, left by plane for Los Angeles last night after hearing the results of the mass meeting.

1,800 Soldiers Approaching

The Army refused to confirm that the 1,800 troops were sent to the scene for possible strike duty, but it was pointed out that the two battalions of the Fifteenth Infantry were trained at Fort Lewis, Wash., for possible strike duty. They are composed of picked men, the finest soldiers brought into the Army from the Selective Service.

The first battalion left Camp Hunter Leggett, where it had engaged in current war games, last night, and by midafternoon was nearing March Field Army Air Base, where the soldiers will bivouac. March Field is less than two hours driving time from here.

The second battalion departed at 8 a. m. yesterday and was reported about 100 miles from Ventura, Calif., where that unit was to spend the night. Ventura also is less than two hours from Inglewood, in case the troops are called upon to take over the aircraft plant.

Night Training, Says Colonel

In confirming the movement of the troops into southern California, Col. Sidney H. Negrotto, aide to Maj.-Gen. Ernest D. Peek of the Ninth Corps Area, said that the march was undertaken to "give new soldiers training in night movements."

But military sources here said it was unusual for an infantry unit to be sent to an air base, unless an emergency situation arose that required the soldiers to be sent into an area which does not have Army camp facilities.

Fort MasArthur, induction center for the Los Angeles district, does not have the facilities to handle 1,800 troops in addition to the recruits already there.

Strikers Appeal to Roosevelt

New York, June 8 (AP).—Striking members of the International Brotherhood of Electrical Workers, Local 3, (A. F. L.), urged President Roosevelt tonight to order Government seizure of the Leviton Manufacturing Plant, Brooklyn, saying that such action would be "in the interest of National Defense and the public good."

Cornelius Woods, secretary of the strike committee, telegraphed the President that the company refused to bargain collectively despite the outcome of a national labor relations board election last October. The union urged "the same steps against the defiant employer that you propose to take against the striking aviation workers."

The strike at the plant, which makes electrical products, was begun last August 28 and once drew the interest of Mrs. Eleanor Roosevelt, who addressed the strikers. Woods said he spoke for 1,600 workers at the plant.

Murray Asks Union to End Plane Strike

Outlawed Walkout Imperils Position Of U. A. W., He Says

C. I. O. President Philip Murray yesterday sent an eleventh hour appeal to North American Aviation Co. strikers to return to work, warning that continuation of their repudiated strike may endanger the position of their C. I. O. union in the aviation industry.

In a message sent from here as strikers were gathering for their mass meeting near the plant to decide on the question of ending their walkout, Murray said:

"As president of the Congress of Industrial Organizations, I strongly urge our membership involved in the North American Aircraft strike to accept your suggestion providing for resumption of operations, with the distinct understanding that in so doing our union and its members will not surrender any of their statutory rights under the National Labor Relations Act, or in any other way yield any of the privileges accorded free Americans under the Constitution of the United States and Congressional enactments.

"In making this special plea to our membership to return to work, I am doing so because I do believe our U. A. W.-C. I. O. should comply with their commitments made through its bona fide representatives in the City of Washington with the National Defense Mediation Board and the North American Aviation Co. to continue at work through negotiations, with the added provision that all matters agreed upon would be retroactive to May 1.

Army Plane Falls, Killing Officer

Banning, Calif., June 8 (AP).—An Army training plane crashed today on the Morongo Indian Reservation, 5 miles from here, killing Lieut. J. R. Brosheer, of Santa Maria. Lieut. K. R. Granzow, the pilot, walked here despite injuries to report the accident.

Bruised about the head, Granzow told police he remembered nothing after encountering a fog over the San Bernardino Mountains while en route from Santa Maria to the Army base at March Field.

Congressmen Argue Peace Move in Forum

There is no shorter cut to war than to negotiate with Adolf Hitler.

These were the blunt words of Representative Clyde Ellis (Democrat), of Arkansas, in a debate last night on the American Forum of the Air broadcast over the Mutual network. The subject was, "Should the United States, While Continuing Its Preparedness Program, Take the Leadership in an Effort to Bring About Peace?"

Representative Ellis said:

"Any peace with that murderous, thieving brute would have to be on the basis of the status quo. Thus we would place our stamp of approval upon his gains already made and thus we would betray all the conquered peoples and demote and demoralize Great Britain."

Interpreted as Weakness

"As long as we don't get mixed up either in the peace movement or the war, Hitler and the German people are afraid of us. They have not forgotten April, 1917, nor November, 1918. If President Roosevelt should delegate Secretary Hull to visit Hitler, that would be met with wild cheers in Berlin—and it would be interpreted by Hitler and the peoples of all nations as the beginning of world capitulation and the end of democracy.

Representative John M. Vorys (Republican), of Ohio, disagreed with Representative Ellis. He said the United States is in strategic position now to start peace negotiations. He added:

"We are not ready to fight now and the world knows it. On the other hand, we are getting ready fast and the world knows it. We are not ready to launch a military offensive, but we are in a position before we get in, to launch a peace offensive.

Denies Appeasement

"We can do this directly or through calling a mediation conference of neutrals to formulate peace terms that do not involve surrender, defeatism or appeasement."

Representative Albert Gore, (Democrat), of Tennessee, does not believe that the United States should attempt to negotiate a peace. He said, in short, that a truce with Hitler is merely giving him a period to prepare for further war, aggression and enslavement. He said: "A negotiated peace would depend for its value, if any, upon Hitler's promises which the record has proved worthless."

Representative Karl E. Mundt, (Republican), of South Dakota, said he believes the United States should launch a peace movement.

"We believe," he said, "that America can best serve God and humanity as well as self by doing its level best to end this war before the war expands to the point where it threatens to bring an end to Christian civilization itself. The United States should make an effort to set in motion while it can the machinery to bring about a just and permanent peace."

Defense Labor Shortage Put At 4 Million

By the Associated Press

Chicago, June 8.—Federal officials estimated today that 4,000,000 additional skilled workers will be needed in defense industries during the next 12 months and made plans to operate training shops 24 hours a day.

Federal officials made this report at a three-day conference to determine how to make full use of existing facilities to carry out public defense training activities provided for in the appropriation bill passed by the House last week.

Lieut. Col. Frank. J. McSherry, director of defense training, said the greatest demand for skilled workers still comes from the shipbuilding, aircraft and machine tool industries, but that a little later a shortage of ordnance and ammunition workers is expected.

Speed Is Imperative

A survey completed last month showed, he said, that in 396 selected defense occupations only 368,000 of those registered at employment offices in the Nation were qualified for the jobs.

Terming the need for speeding up the training programs "imperative," he said one of the first steps will be to establish—and run at capacity—work shops under the combined direction of the National Youth Administration and public vocational schools.

This program will combine organized shop training and vocational education with work experience on regular NYA projects.

It was estimated that in the fiscal year, 368,000 NYA enrollees can be made available for defense industries.

Here also for the meeting, which ends tomorrow, are three other Federal officials—Ewan Clague, employment security director; Aubrey Williams, National Youth Administrator; and John W. Studebaker, Commissioner of Education.

They were unable to estimate how many more skilled workers would be needed in any State or district, explaining that the number will depend on how the remaining defense contracts are let and where the best labor supplies happen to be.

300,000 to Get 5-Cent Rise In Textile Pay

An increase of 5 cents an hour in the minimum wage of 300,000 textile workers, the largest single group to receive raises under the wage-hour law, was announced yesterday by Gen. Philip B. Fleming, wage-hour administrator.

Effective June 30, a minimum of 37½ cents an hour must be paid in the industry. This will raise the pay of the lowest-scale workers from $13 to $15 for a 40-hour week. Since October, 1939, the minimum wage has been 32½ cents.

Fleming said the new wage order would contain no provisions restricting deductions for purchases in company-owned stores or rentals of company-owned homes, but that a wage-hour representative would conduct hearings in various textile centers with a view to possible amendment of the order in this respect.

Manufacturers have opposed regulation of pay deductions for such purposes, while labor spokesmen have demanded that the practice of deductions be abolished.

About 650,000 persons are employed in the industry which manufactures cotton textiles, towels, sheets, pillow cases, silk, rayon, linen, cordage and twine.

Officials said the following groups of workers would receive pay increases:

Cotton workers—207,000.
Textile products (sheets, pillow cases, etc.)—28,700.
Silk and rayon—47,000.
Cordage and twine—5,000.
Jute textiles—1,500.

Lane Returns, Praises Morale of Yugoslavs

Copyright by New York Times

New York, June 8.—Reporting that all Americans in Belgrade had survived the Nazi blitzkrieg, and highly praising the Yugoslav morale during the short but savage war, Arthur Bliss Lane, United States Minister to Yugoslavia, returned from Europe tonight aboard the Yankee Clipper.

Lane, American career diplomat in numerous European and Central American capitals since 1916, said he would have to make his report directly to the State Department in Washington and, accordingly, was not at liberty to comment on what he personally observed during the Nazi invasion.

"Any news I might give you would be pretty stale by this time," the 47-year-old minister, whose manner reflected the strain he has been under since early April, commented.

Lane was accompanied by Mrs. Lane and Robert B. MacAtee, First Secretary of the American Legation at Belgrade. Mr. and Mrs. Lane were at the home of another American diplomat on April 6 and thus escaped possible death or injury when the United States Legation building was, as he put it, "pretty badly damaged by a bomb." He declined, however, to enlarge upon any personal dangers they underwent, declaring that "so many people suffered so much worse experiences than the little we went through."

Met By Daughter

The Lanes were met at LaGuardia Field marine terminal by their daughter, Miss Margaret Lane, who had left Belgrade last November; Mr. Lane's brother and sister-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. George Bliss Lane, and several close friends.

About sixty American members of the Belgrade colony—"all who wanted to be evacuated"—had left the country safely before he departed from Europe, the minister said. Lane left Yugoslavia for Budapest, then went to Lisbon by way of Spain.

"The morale of the people of Belgrade was magnificent throughout," Lane commented. "I have no hesitation in saying that."

Lane is stopping at the Ambassador Hotel for a day or so, then will go to Washington to confer with State Department officials. He also will furnish a report on the Yugoslav food situation to the American Red Cross if such information is requested, Lane said.

MacAtee, who left immediately for Washington, told reporters of the completely crushed status of the former kingdom of Yugoslavia. Commenting on conditions in Belgrade, he said:

"Things were chaotic, but were soon settled. As you know, when the Germans came, everything was quickly organized."

In following the fugitive Yugoslav government to various points on its flight from Belgrade, MacAtee said his party several times was "bombed and strafed with machine guns by low-flying planes."

"At Sarajevo, I was forced to hide in a little culvert beside a road to escape the bullets," he said. "A house 100 yards away was struck."

Burma Road Traffic Cut, Japanese Say

Tokyo (Monday), June 9 (U.P.).—Japanese naval planes Sunday bombed the suspension bridge over the Pei Pan River between Kunming and Chungking, stopping all movement of supplies coming in over the Burma Road for the Chinese Nationalist capital, the newspaper Asahi reported from a "Japanese air base."

$2,000 Changed a Life, Decided a Career

You have asked me (writes a well-known New York agent) to tell your readers the story that made me choose life insurance as my career. So here it is—the story of a young couple who lived on a farm in upstate New York back in the nineties . . .

It was unusually poor land, that farm. Stony and worked out—the sort of farm that makes a woman an old before her time and breaks her husband's heart.

It didn't break this young farmer's heart. But it filled him with a grim determination to see that his baby son had a better chance than he had had. Somehow his son was going to have a college education—going to have the thing that would give him a chance to choose the kind of life he wanted.

Their son was going to college . . . It became the most important thing in that young couple's life. They struggled desperately to save money, they made many sacrifices to pay the premiums on a $2,000 life insurance policy . . .

By the time the boy was four years old, he was an orphan, living with his grandmother. She was a fine woman, with her son's same grim determination. She never forgot that her son wanted his boy to go to college, so she didn't touch that $2,000 that came from her son's policy, not even when she was hard-pressed for money—which was often.

The boy went to college. $2,000 was more money then than it is now; by combining it with a lot of hard work, he got through college and went out into the world with a first-class education.

He found many opportunities. But when it came to deciding among them, he remembered always that he owed his opportunities to a life insurance policy and to the sacrifices his parents and his grandmother had made for that policy and its proceeds.

So he became a life insurance agent . . . And that story is true. I know it's true—because I was that boy . . .

Eight of British Convoy Sunk Where Bismarck Was Hunting

Copyright by New York Tribune Inc.

Woods Hole, Mass., June 8.—Sinking of eight merchant ships in a convoy of nine by German submarines and raiders, 240 miles south of Cape Farewell, Greenland, practically in the shadow of the North American continent, was revealed today with the arrival of the Coast Guard patrol boat, General Greene from ice patrol.

The General Greene commanded by Chief Bo'sun C. Lawrence Jordan, who was torpedoed in the last war, picked up 39 members of the crew of 80 off the British refrigerator ship Marconi after making a five-day dash from St. Johns, Newfoundland.

Stories of the survivors, as related here by Coast Guardsmen, indicated the wholesale sinkings were the prelude to the spectacular duel between H. M. S. Hood and the Bismarck, which eventually laid both of those mighty vessels on the floor of the Atlantic.

The General Greene had finished a tour of duty on ice patrol and was putting into St. Johns when it intercepted a wireless from the patrol boat Norseland stating it was searching for survivors of an eastbound convoy.

Crew Volunteers to Go

Every man on the General Greene volunteered to rush out to sea again to try to render help nearly 1,000 miles away.

Five days later, on May 26, the 125-foot Coast Guard craft arrived at the reported position of the sinkings.

At first the search was complicated by snow and fog. Finally, the weather cleared and lookouts spied a lifeboat.

Not a man in the lifeboat could raise a hand or talk. They sat helpless in water up to their waists, half-frozen.

Members of the crew of the General Greene clambered down a rope ladder and passed up the survivors, one by one, until 19 had been taken aboard.

The first man who was able to talk, T. C. Townsend, chief officer of the sunken Marconi, told the Coast Guards there was another lifeboat in the vicinity. He had seen it the previous day, but during the night it had vanished in the snow and fog.

After searching six hours, the Gen. Greene found the other boat and took aboard 20 more survivors. From the second boat one man had been buried in the sea just before the Coast Guards arrived.

"They were on short rations, had little food and less water, and he drank salt water, went crazy and died," said Jordan.

As the Gen. Greene started for Newfoundland, the Coast Guards gave up their bunks to the survivors and made beds for themselves out of engine-room waste and rope.

Little by little, the survivors recovered and began pouring out details. The Marconi, a 7,402-ton vessel, was bound for Buenos Aires.

The convoy having apparently passed safely through the submarine zone, had been turned loose to make the dash south of Greenland and down the coast of Newfoundland without escort.

The ships were attacked soon after midnight, apparently in waters covered by the United States' neutrality patrol. But on that point Bo'sun Jordan would have nothing to say.

The Coast Guards did state that they understood a "nest" of 12 submarines had been operating in the vicinity, hundreds of miles from European bases.

Planes Joined in Attack

Seven of the nine vessels were dealt death blows before the ships could scatter. Obeying the British admiralty rule, two ran in the fog. One was the Marconi.

About 1:30 a. m., when all were below decks except the men on watch, and when everybody believed they had escaped the menace, there was a terrific explosion, amidships of the radio room.

The wireless equipment was blown to bits and there was no way to flash an alarm.

The vessel rolled over, nearly on its beam's end. As the men below scrambled on deck there was a second explosion. The captain, whose name was Hallstone, the chief engineer, William Henry Harrison, and 12 members of the crew were killed.

As the rest took to the lifeboats, shells began falling about them. In the darkness they could not see any craft but supposed they were being shelled by a submarine.

While they shoved off from the sinking ship, they believed they heard planes roaring overhead and supposed bombs were being dropped, as well as shells, but they could not guess where the planes had come from, so far from possible bases. It was pointed out they might have taken off from raiding cruisers.

British Landing Party Seized On Syrian Coast, Vichy Says

By Ralph E. Heinzen
United Press Staff Writer

Vichy, June 8.—French defenders tonight claimed to have seized an entire British force landed from warships on the coast of Lebanon a few hours after the launching of the British-Free French invasion of Syria, condemned by Marshal Petain as "unjust and revolting" aggression.

The British landing party, armed with submachine guns, was said in an official communique to have been landed from a force of blockading British warships consisting of a battleship, two cruisers and five destroyers, south of Beirut, capital of Lebanon. The entire force was made prisoners, it was stated.

Although the Vichy government refrained from stating whether it regards France as at war with her ally of a year ago, the aged Petain, in a message to the Syrian forces, called for a desperate resistance.

Denies Nazis Are in Syria

He repeated again Vichy's denial that any German soldiers or planes were in Syria—an allegation which the government here calls a "cunning pretext" intended to justify today's pre-dawn invasion.

The British heavily bombed Beirut and bombed and machine-gunned airdromes at Damascus, Aleppo and Rayak, it was stated.

These airdromes are the nearest French air bases to the southern front in Syria where British and "Free French" tank columns and motorized artillery are attempting to drive northward to Damascus and Beirut, aided by bomber and fighter planes.

One column is moving up the Jordan River valley near the Mediterranean coast toward Beirut and Rayak and the other is striking toward Damascus from the Trans-Jordan frontier, moving between the Jebel ed Druze Mountains and the desert.

West of Lake Tiberius, it was stated officially, French forces are "effectively holding" an invading column striking up from Palestine.

[Strong mechanized British forces were reported attacking Banias, some 25 miles north of the Sea of Galilee, the Associated Press reported.]

Although the French claimed that resistance is "perfect," there was no indication as to what depth, if any, the British-De Gaullist penetration had reached.

But 10,000 Involved

Marshal Petain's message was sent to the Syrian people and Gen. Henri Dentz, commander of the French army of the Levant, after the marshal, Vice Premier Darlan and other cabinet leaders met in several emergency consultations during the day.

"We will defend ourselves to the bitter end," an official spokesman announced.

"This applies to Syria and Lebanon and to all other parts of our empire. We had anticipated this thoroughly unjustified attack and all plans of meeting it had been well made in advance."

Petain, Darlan and War Minister Gen. Charles Huntziger met again at 7:30 p. m. to study late dispatches from Dentz which indicated that thus far barely 10,000 men were engaged on both sides in the invasion.

"France, faithful to her declarations, can in all certitude say with pride that we were not the first to turn our arms against our former allies anymore today than we did at Mers-El-Kebir, Dakar and Sfax," Petain's message said.

Japan's Leaders To Discuss Indies

Tokyo (Monday), June 9 (U.P.).—Leaders of the government will meet today with heads of the armed services to discuss the future of Japan's negotiations with the Netherlands East Indies for a broad economic agreement, the newspaper Asahi reported. Drastic decisions were considered possible, the newspaper said.

British, Free French Offer Syria Independence

Jebel Ed Druz toward Damascus, capital of Syria.

[The German radio announced allied forces had reached Soueida, capital of the Jebel Ed Druz territory. Soueida is about 23 miles north of Syria's border with Trans-Jordan and some 58 miles south of Damascus, Syrian capital.]

Far and wide over the territory, leaflets were scattered from American-built Tomahawk planes advising the Syrians of the promises of independence and calling upon them to aid in stopping Hitler.

One of these leaflets from the British Middle East commander-in-chief, Gen. Archibald P. Wavell, appealed to Syrians who would not fight alongside the British and Free French at least not to hamper the liberating movement.

The proclamation ended with: "We remember the common victory over the same Boche 20 years ago. Let's beat them again. We would like victory with our comrades of the last war by our sides again, not against us."

In the name of Gen. Charles de Gaulle, supreme leader of the Free French movement, the Middle East commander, Gen. Georges Catroux, proclaimed himself the liberator of Syria and Lebanon and declared their people sovereign and independent.

With the help of the R. A. F. and Free French planes, leaflets bearing this proclamation showered down on cities and villages and on army posts.

Leaflets which Gen. Catroux signed and had scattered over Syria declared "Syria and the United States are with us."

"The humiliating, perfidious policy of the Vichy government has plunged the Levant into war," the leaflets read. "We will make war with energy, abnegation, firmness and with honor and full hope for victory we know will be ours," he said.

In another appeal he said "Vichy has ordered Frenchmen in Syria to fight for Germany." Then he declared:

"France forbids you to execute this criminal order, from which I release you, and I take you under my command.

"I enjoin you to join my forces and the Allied forces. I forbid any resistance and shall send before military courts any soldiers disobeying this order.

"I order you to assemble at your positions with your arms and equipment ready to take your place in battle.

"Follow me along the path of honor."

Wavell's leaflet declared the Germans who had occupied two-thirds of France and controlled the rest had now begun the conquest of the French colonies.

"We come not as an enemy, but on the contrary to assist you against a common adversary. Instead of resisting us, help us against the mortal enemy of your people. We come in strength and to resist would be vain. We know if you fought it would be as heroes. But in defending this territory you would be simply defending the enemy's interests."

Catroux, long an expert in affairs of the Middle Eastern world although his last assignment under the republic was as governor general of French Indo-China, offered independence in the name of "Free France, who identifies herself with the traditional and real France."

The Free French had entered, he said, "to drive out of Syria the forces of Hitler" and to save the Levant from becoming "an enemy base directed against the British and ourselves."

Catroux promised economic security to Syria and concluded his call with:

"Inhabitants of Syria and Lebanon, the great hour in our history has sounded for you. France declares you independent by the voice of her sons who are fighting for her life and the liberty of the world."

He offered a treaty between Free France and Syria and Lebanon—an offer immediately backed by the British government.

The combined military-political offensive had ben planned with Hitler-like exactness.

At 2 a. m. (7 p. m., Saturday, Eastern standard time) the combined forces of the British and French started moving across Palestine's northern border and also, perhaps, from Trans-Jordan into Lebanon and Syria proper.

Before down this advance guard—presumably motorized, including the swift Bren gun carriers Britain has used so successfully in Africa—had established contact with the advance posts of the French mandate's defenses.

Indirect reports through Vichy said this contact touched off fierce battling but British sources in Cairo lacked confirmation.

If the occupying force and the defenders were engaged they were fighting in a mountainous zone known for the fierceness of past encounters between French forces and natives—the Jebel Ed Druz region.

British Shell Coast

By the Associated Press

Beirut, June 8.—The French high command announced its forces defended themselves "brilliantly" against concerted, day-long attacks by the combined British and Free French units.

A British naval squadron consisting of a battleship, two cruisers and five destroyers pounded the coast south of Beirut, and the Lebanon capital itself was raided by the R. A. F. along with airdromes in both Syria and Lebanon.

Some British planes were shot down in attacks along the southern front, where the allied forces first entered the French mandate, and some enemy armored cars were destroyed, the high command announced.

Beirut itself was bombed twice, the communique said, the first time without results and in the second assault small reservoirs of the national petroleum company were hit, starting a fire of "slight importance."

American Supplies Help

New York, June 8 (AP).—The Free French radio station at Brazzaville, French Equatorial Africa, today announced that "our military forces in Syria are continuing their advance in spite of scattered opposition."

"German airdromes are being destroyed as we advance," the radio declared in a broadcast heard by N. B. C. "We take pride in announcing that our initial success has been due in large measure to American supplies."

Nazi Slain, Scores Of Belgians Seized

Brussels, Belgium, July 8 (AP).—Hundreds of male residents of the Brussels suburb of Laeken have been arrested as the result of the slaying of a German soldier in Laeken Park, it was announced tonight.

The soldier, Rudolf Vosely, was hit by two revolver shots fired by two unidentified civilians, who escaped in the darkness. The German military commander of the Brussels area warned that unless the slayers were handed over to authorities other measures would be taken.

Target Tests Set For 16-Inch Guns

Fort Story, Va., June 8.—There will be heavy seacoast firing at Fort Story from Tuesday through Saturday as the 16-inch Coastal Defense Battery joins in the annual target practice of the 246th Coast Artillery.

The last target practice held with the 16-inch guns was in 1928 but in 1933 a check firing of one round per gun was held.

Husband Makes Flying Visit to Juliana

Ottawa, June 8 (AP).—Prince Bernhard of the Netherlands unexpectedly arrived here today from England for a two-weeks visit with his wife, Princess Juliana, and their two daughters.

The prince left England by airplane yesterday and arrived here at 9 a. m. today. The legation was silent as to the prince's future plans, but it was thought likely he would visit Washington before returning to England.

Turkey Hails British Drive Into Syria

By Daniel Deluce
Associated Press Staff Writer

Ankara, June 8.—The Turkish government will observe a hands-off policy toward invaded Syria, taking only such action as is necessary to defend its own national frontiers, the British Embassy was reliably informed today.

The Turks, with the Germans already installed on their European frontiers and dominating the entrance to the Dardanelles, were said in informed quarters to view the Allied drive into the French territory with considerable satisfaction.

President Ismet Inonu was on the Syrian border inspecting Turkish defense arrangements when the invasion actually materialized.

In some circles the thrust into the French mandate was regarded as having forestalled Axis preparations for a full-scale attack eastward from Libya toward Suez.

Airborne troops, it was also pointed out, would be useless in Syria in the face of heavy tanks which the British could bring into action.

It was disclosed meanwhile that two German and three Italian planes, had been forced down on the Turkish coast and their crews, including nine German airmen, interned. The Germans were reported en route to Syria fro mthe Dodecanese Islands.

Despite heavy R.A.F. raids on Rhodes, that island's airfields were reported still serving as refueling bases for Axis aircraft bound from the Balkans to Syria.

Besides the port of Latakia, German ground staffs were reported preparing two other air bases on the north Syrian coast for operations against the British Island Bastion of Cyprus.

Advices from Alexandretta said there were no German regular troops in Syria, but that there were many air technicians, ground crews and propagandists.

Germans in civilian clothes are in charge of all antiaircraft batteries throughout Syria, these dispatches said.

Sympathy with the Free French movement was said, however, to be spreading rapidly among the younger ranks of the French Syrian army.

Antistrike Bills Facing Congress

War Department bill for the coming fiscal year was delayed on Friday when House leaders, fearing they would be unable to defeat it, forced an adjournment of the House to give them time to marshal their forces. Yesterday they were still seeking to tighten their lines in the face of enthusiasm for the proposal shown on the House floor Friday.

An amendment to the Selective Service Act was offered last Thursday by Senator Connally (Democrat), of Texas, to permit taking over of a plant whenever defense production is impeded or threatened by "a strike or other labor disturbance or other cause."

Army Mounting Machine Guns on 'Jeep Cars,' Giving Enemy Fliers, Soldiers Reason to Pause

Associated Press WIREPHOTO

LETHAL LIZZY—The Army's new quarter-ton "jeep" cars have been turned into lethal weapons with the installation of a .30 caliber air-cooled machine gun. The bantam car, with the new machine gun mount, is manned by men from the Third Reconnaissance Troop of Fort Lewis, Wash., at Camp Hunter Liggett, Calif., for summer maneuvers

By Jack Beardwood
Associated Press Staff Writer

Camp Hunter Liggett, Calif., June 8.—Mechanical ingenuity has turned the Army's new quarter-ton "jeep" cars into lethal lizzies capable of spewing death as they bounce over rough terrain at 60 miles an hour.

The innovation—in which a 30 caliber air-cooled machine gun is permanently installed on a tripod in the rear seat on the dwarfish "blitz buggies"—was developed by Maj. Harry Miller, commander of the Third Reconnaissance Troop, here from Fort Lewis on summer maneuvers.

It will be submitted to the War Department for consideration as regulation equipment.

The "jeeps," getting their first real test in the Nation's big war games of 1941, are being praised up and down the ranks for their maneuverability, durability and performance.

They are bamtam cars with four forward speeds, four wheel drive, short wheel base. It is almost impossible to tip them over. They have a top speed of 60 miles an hour. They can traverse almost any terrain.

Originally, they were designed for reconnaissance and to facilitate the rapid thrusts of modern warfare. They have enough power to tow a 37 mm. antitank gun. They can be used to rush commanding officers to vital points where sedans or small trucks are unable to go.

Now, Maj. Miller has given the "jeeps" fangs.

Fashioning a tripod from three braces taken from a wrecked truck, Maj. Miller mounted the machine gun so it can be swung in a complete circle and elevated to about 90 degrees. Heretofore, the only protection for soldiers riding in "jeeps" were sidearms or automatic rifles.

Now, the "jeep" can offer real fire power, spitting enough ammunition to keep infantrymen at a distance or make a strafing pilot think twice before he dives on the Army's smallest piece of four-wheeled motorized equipment.

French African Area May Secede

pected in the immediate future unless there is a serious overhaul of the prevailing school of thought directing "collaboration" negotiations.

That Admiral Darlan is still making a stand in Vichy, however, could be seen in the violent accusations of "unjustifiable aggressions" and "political piracy" leveled against the British contained in the various communiques issued throughout the day.

Criticism Increases

The acrimonious tone of these communiques increased hour by hour as news began to trickle through from Syria that large garrisons there were wholeheartedly going over to the Free French forces—a report received here at a late hour this evening stated that some 4,000 men with modern material and ammunition had gone over to the British in the Gebel Druse area in the south.

Another report received indirectly from Toulon this evening stated that several units of the French fleet had been ordered to get steam ready for midnight tonight. They were reported to be loading food and other supplies from lighters in the harbor, in order, it was said, "to avoid too much public speculation" on the nature of the moves being prepared.

The direct connection between these preparations and Syrian developments, however, is scarcely likely to escape the attention of any analytical observer. Admiral Darlan, since the incidents of Mers El Kebir and Dakar, has been doggedly awaiting a legitimate occasion to match his fleet's steel with that of the British and to this end has ordered the press in unoccupied France to be guided by the Ministry of Information into an attitude calculated to arouse French public indignation to a pitch where it would accept a more "realistic" attitude on the part of the Vichy government toward British "aggressive manifestations against French territorial possessions."

Typical Nazi Diet Disgusts Interned British Women

By Angus Thuermer
Associated Press Staff Writer

Ravensburg, Germany, June 8.—There is a hotbed of British patriotism here in the heart of southern Germany.

Three miles from this little walled town 330 English women and six children are interned for the duration of the war. They are living in three large buildings on the grounds of a convent of a German order of Catholic nuns.

Some have been in internment at various places since the Polish campaign late in 1939—but throughout the camp the spirit of "thumbs up" still prevails.

The women were brought here from Belgium, the Netherlands, Poland and parts of the Reich itself—picked up by German police. The internees range from girls of 5 to women over 60. Some had been governesses. One girl taught Dutch officers how to ride horseback. One was captured with the French Red Cross inside the Maginot Line. Others are blues singers and dancers who had been entertaining at continental clubs.

Among them, too, is Col. Mary Booth, granddaughter of the famous Salvation Army leader. She was taken into custody on a battlefield in Holland, where she was caring for her charges. About ten others were taken from aboard ships seized by German high seas cruisers.

Several of the women were bitter about what they called severe conditions they were forced to undergo in occupied territories and the Reich proper before arriving in this camp.

The internees get about the same food as the German population, and one of their pet peeves is the heavy percentage of potato dishes in the German diet.

Arrival of food packages from the Canadian and Scottish Red Cross was one of the greatest events in a rather humdrum life. Cigarettes also play an important part in camp life and visiting foreign journalists drew on the first English cigarettes they had had since the outbreak of the war. The cigarette is also a medium of exchange in the camp.

"We run almost out of things to do and things to say. We haven't a radio, we have no English newspapers and we've read all the books," one young woman confided.

"One of the things I've got to say for this place," Blues Singer Boreen Coburn said, "it's one place in the world where we can sun bathe without fear of curious men."

Syria Invasion French Affair, Berlin Says

By the Associated Press

Berlin, June 8.—British operations in Syria were watched intensely by Berlin tonight but a news service close to the Wilhelmstrasse, Dienst Aus Deutschland, said the invasion was regarded here, at least for the present, as a matter which "concerns chiefly France."

"The declaration of the French government also that this portion of its empire will be defended to the fullest extent of French strength is not doubted by Germany," the news service said.

"The greatest reserve is being observed in Berlin, but nevertheless it is pointed out that this new act of aggression is in line with earlier British attacks on Oran and Dakar."

Destruction of ten merchant ships and a patrol boat and the second Luftwaffe assault in four days on Britain's big Mediterranean naval base at Alexandria were reported today.

Planes and submarines accounted for the shipping losses, the high command said.

Successful artillery bombardment of British ships in Tobruk Harbor and air bombing of British position and vehicles in the Axis-encircled Libyan base were reported by the high command.

Nazis Bombed At Salvaging Of Lost Ship

By the Associated Press

London, June 8.—A German salvage ship, working on "an evidently important wreck off Terschelling Island in the North Sea Saturday, was bombed and set afire, the air ministry announced today.

A plane of the bomber command, approaching the island, off the Netherlands coast, saw a large sunken wreck and the salvage ship surrounded by five antiaircraft ships.

The British plane ducked in low between the antiaircraft ships and "our first bomb, dropped short," said the navigator. "But we had better luck with the rest. One fell alongside the salvage vessel and I was convinced that another fell either directly on the vessel or the wreck."

The pilot said that after the attack black smoke was seen to rise 300 feet.

On the way home the British plane, which had joined up with another R. A. F. was menaced by two Messerschmitt 109s, one of which was exposed to a long burst. When last seen, one German plane was going down in slow circles gushing black smoke. The other disappeared.

British bombers also attacked German convoys off the Dutch and Norwegian coasts and dropped many sticks of bombs across the docks at Brest despite fog and poor visibility. Docks and shipping at Bergen, Norway, were also attacked.

The British lost three bombers and one fighter in patrol and offensive action Saturday. Aerial activity today was light.

Bombs from a lone German plane in a twilight raid killed four persons in a town in southwest England today and injured a number of other persons.

London Blames Syrian War On Darlan

By the United Press

London, June 8.—British and "Free French" forces have attacked Syria with full force to smash an "intolerable situation" in which the Vichy government was permitting Germany to bring the strategic French mandate under full Nazi control in violation of all armistice terms, it was stated officially today.

Both the British foreign office and "Free French" headquarters of Gen. Charles de Gaulle bitterly assailed the government of Marshal Petain for surrendering to the Germans and acting in "flagrant conflict" with the aged marshal's promises not to oppose his former ally.

"Free French" headquarters accused Vice Premier Admiral Darlan of "giving the French Empire to Germany" and said that his policy bears the responsibility for any fighting that occurs in Syria.

Risk Declaration of War

The British obviously were risking an open declaration of war by the Vichy government, but it was felt that France was so strongly aligned with Germany already that she would probably move against Britain in every way she dared.

Another risk in the offensive was that Germany might seize the moment to open her long-awaited offensive into Egypt from Libya.

A large proportion of the approximately 500,000 men the British have in the Middle East are facing the Libyan frontier, but it was believed that Gen. Sir Henry Maitland Wilson must command an army on the Syrian front which surpasses in numbers and equipment the 45,000 defenders.

News of the British-Free French offensive reached London too late for Sunday morning newspapers. The first word that reached the public was on the BBC broadcast at 1 p. m.

The offensive was the answer to an increasing clamor in the press and public for action.

Reliable quarters said the Allied forces were determined to avoid another fiasco like that which occurred when the Free French tried to occupy Dakar. They said the Allies would attempt a complete occupation of Syria no matter what resistance they met. It was believed that the strength or weakness of French resistance would depend largely upon the force of the initial Allied attack.

Advance Along Euphrates

Copyright by New York Times

London, June 8.—The Vichy news agency tonight cited British sources as saying that British troops were advancing in Syria from Iraq along the Euphrates River.

Unofficial reports reaching London said there was a large German troopship at Salonika scheduled to depart from there tomorrow for Beirut. The Royal Air Force, which is keeping close watch on the entire zone affected by the new operations, have spotted big concentrations of enemy troops in Rhodes.

$800,000 DAMAGE—Tugs aid the $1,500,000 liner Seminole to pull away from the fast spreading fire that destroyed two of Clyde-Mallory line's three terminals at Jacksonville, Fla., yesterday, causing damage estimated at $800,000 expansion program

The fire apparently started in the center of the main machine shop building—a four-story brick and wood structure that had been oil-soaked by years of machine operations. From there the flames rapidly spread over two adjacent wings and spread to the company's oil supply tanks which spilled their contents, making fire fighting hazardous.

Five Wheeling firemen were burned, one seriously by flying embers.

For a time the flames threatened a nearby "bulk" storage depot of the Gulf Oil Refining Corp. The machine plant and depot are situated along the Ohio River, just north of the downtown section and near the suburb of Warwood.

Fire Destroys Piers, Scorches Liner

By the Associated Press

Jacksonville, Fla., June 8.—A fast-spreading fire that caused an estimated $800,000 damage today destroyed two of the Clyde-Mallory Line's three terminals here and almost trapped the liner Seminole.

The $1,500,000 liner, which arrived this morning on its regular run from New York and Charleston, pulled away from its pier as flames scorched the port side and set two lifeboats afire. The passengers already had disembarked.

Mayor George C. Blume, acting Police Chief E. L. Acosta and Federal agents began an investigation. They said the cause had not been determined, but that the possibility of sabotage would be investigated.

Police reinforced their guard over the waterfront last weekend after a tip, reportedly from the Federal Bureau of Investigation, that sabotage attempts might be made on Memorial Day, but only the regular patrol plus company guards had been maintained since then.

The burned warehouse-piers contained refrigerating equipment used in handling perishable shipments. The fire was checked just before it reached the third terminal, where large quantities of highly inflammable rosin were stored.

The docks are located only a few blocks from the main financial and shopping section of the city.

Nine firemen were hospitalized, one from injuries suffered in the collision of a fire truck and an ambulanc and the others from smoke and heat prostration. Scores of soldiers and sailors, off duty, aided firemen in controlling the blaze.

Two Coast Guard patrol boats pulled endangered vessels and barges to safety while the city fireboat attacked the fire from the waterfront side.

New Detector Dooms U-Boats, Inventor Kettering Declares

By the Associated Press

Detroit, June 8.—Charles F. Kettering, one of America's foremost inventors, predicted today that German submarines would be driven from the seas by development of a device to catch them on the surface at night.

The engineering genius who gave the automobile industry the self-starter and a score of other inventions expressed a belief that the antisubmarine device would be completed and in operation "within a reasonable time."

"We have been working with the Navy for six years," he said, referring to General Motors Research Division, which he heads. "It's not going to be too hard to beat the subs."

Kettering also said that the problem of interception of night bombers "is being licked now" in England by detection devices "now in production."

He did not indicate whether the devices were being improved to the extent that they would guide fighter planes to German bombers whether there was moonlight or not. Detectors now in use by the British are said by observers to direct pilots to within several thousand feet of German planes, closer detection depending on light conditions.

Explaining the job of combating submarines, Kettering said it was the practice of German U-boats to come to the surface to recharge their batteries and then wait in the path of a convoy whose position and course had been reported by scouting planes.

"When the convoy comes along the submarine moves right with it," he said. "It stays some distance from the nearest ship and can't be seen. Then, just at daybreak, it submerges to cover the conning tower and makes it attack. After it puts torpedoes into several ships the escorting destroyers are too busy rescuing people in the water to stop it from getting away.

Surface Location Necessary

"All you have to do is locate him when he's on the surface at night and you've got him. Detectors will find hi mwhen he's under water."

Of each ten British merchant ships sunk, four are estimated sent to the bottom by submarines, four by air attack, one by surface raiders, and one by other causes.

"If we can stop that first four, warships and airplanes can concentrate on the rest and probably do a great deal in cutting the other losses," the inventor said.

Kettering told a group of returned American war correspondents that one of the big advantages the American Navy had over other navies was in the engine being installed in new submarines.

Death Toll High in Alexandria's Worst Raid; 50,000 Flee City

By the United Press

Alexandria, June 8.—Two squadrons of about 40 bombing planes raided Alexandria last night, smashing a city block or apartments and causing perhaps three times as many casualties as those of last Wednesday when 150 civilians were killed.

Terrified by the slaughter and devastation of the second bombing raid in four days, the people started a mass exodus from the city. Probably as many as 50,000 refugees fled by cart, truck, cab, bicycle and motorcycle between dawn and 7 p. m. Sunday.

Most of the casualties were in the apartment block. Late Sunday night bodies still were being taken from the ruins at that time.

The first attack was concentrated on the harbor, the home of Britain's eastern Mediterranean fleet, but little damage was done.

Later a larger group of bombers attacked the city, the harbor and numerous defense positions on the outskirts. At least 30 German bombers blasted away for about three hours, beginning at 2:20 a. m. Many buildings in the center of Alexandria were destroyed.

On several occasions the planes straddled their objectives with sticks of bombs ranging in number from five to eight. They destroyed considerable civilian property, including homes and shops.

British Continue Mop-up of Ethiopia

Cairo, June 8 (AP).—The African war was fought mostly in the skies over the weekend as the British bombed the Libyan ports of Derna and Bengasi.

The Middle East command reported artillery duelling at Axis-besieged Tobruk, Libya and patrol actions in the Salum area.

(In Rome the Italian high command said its planes struck again at the besieged British garrison at Tobruk and raided the British base at Malta.)

Pursuing their cleanup of Ethiopia the British pressed on from the Omo River. They listed their gains as 3,000 European and 1,000 Eritrean prisoners, 20 guns, 200 trucks, many machine guns and other materiel.

The British attack on Bengasi started fires on the Central Mole. Air fields, barracks and grounded aircraft were attacked at Derna.

Gov. Svane Of Greenland Due In Capital Today

By the Associated Press

Aksel Svane, Governor of Southern Greenland, is expected here today for a round of conferences which may have an important bearing on the part the North Atlantic island will play in defense of the Western Hemisphere.

Svane was due in Boston yesterday on a Coast Guard cutter with a group of American officials. The Americans have been on a survey trip of the island, where the United States has agreed to establish air bases for the "protection" of Greenland and the Western Hemisphere.

Officials of the State Department and the Danish Ministry said they did not know the Governor's plans, but assumed he would confer with Hendrik de Kauffmann, Danish Minister, and with State Department representatives.

Southeastern U. Students Hear Baccalaureate

Graduating students of Southeastern University, at baccalaureate exercises yesterday in the Chevy Chase Presbyterian Church, were told by the Rev. J. Hillman Hollister, pastor, that the "tomorrow of religion" rests in the hands of "folk who think."

Addressing more than 250 students of the law and accounting schools, the Rev. Mr. Hollister said it was believed by some that religion "was on its way out" and that there was nothing to do about it.

The same thing might be said of democracy because of the surge of totalitarian philosophy, and of the institution of the family because of the increase of divorces, the Rev. Mr. Hollister contended.

"In order to save religion," he asserted, "we must learn to think religion through. We have the same opportunity to discover truths in religion as in the field of science or law.

"We ought to be concerned about religion just as we are concerned about the future of democracy and the future of the family," he added. Several hundred relatives and friends of the students witnessed the academic procession, led by Dr. James A. Bell, president of the university.

Commencement exercises will be held Wednesday night at Memorial Continental Hall.

Old Glory Flies Throughout D. C.

Flag Week, sponsored by the United States Flag Association, was officially opened yesterday, with Old Glory fluttering in the June breezes over many a Washington home and public building.

This year Flag Week is dedicated to the memory of Col. James A. Moss, late president general of the Flag Association, who was fatally injured in a traffic accident in New York, April 23. Col. Moss, a veteran of three wars and author of the Officer's Manual, was the founder of the United States Flag Association, and the originator of Flag Week three years ago to promote national unity and an appreciation of the ideals and institutions symbolized by the United States flag.

Services in churches throughout the Nation marked the beginning of the patriotic week yesterday. Ceremonies will include rallies in schools and in patriotic, civic and service club meetings this week, culminating with parades and community celebrations on Flag Day, June 14.

Besides the District Commissioners who acted last week, thirty governors and more than 650 mayors have proclaimed Flag Week, or signified that their communities would observe the tribute to the Stars and Stripes.

President Roosevelt is the honorary president general of the Flag Association. Chairman of its board of founders is Chief Justice Charles Evans Hughes, and former Secretary of War Patrick J. Hurley is executive chairman of the sponsoring committee for Flag Week.

Vaudeville numbers will be headed by Kollette and Kolleen Deane, sister team from musical comedy, and Stunt Men Pedro and Rafael. Caroling by Mary La Marr and Buddy Shaner. Continuous dance music in the evenings by the Bill Strickland band and Lotus' Continentals.

SHOREHAM COMPOSER. Busiest young composer hereabouts is Arden Clar, of the Shoreham's Barnee-Lowe orchestra. Right now he's up to his ears in a sonata. Among his brilliant and highly stylized compositions are "Jade," "Dance of the Crab" and "Jungle Madness."

ARABS AND ARTISTS will figure in the unique new Casino Royal revue opening today. Omar, the Arabian dancer, is heralded as a regular whirling dervish. Dancers Bob and Betty Brown draw pictures with both their hands and feet,—meaning that Bob draws big pictures of such stepping celebs as Hal Le Roy or Bill Robinson and then proceeds to illustrate their dancing technic. The Chester Doherty Girls will offer glowing dance ensembles. . . Maestro Jack (Jive) Schafer's newest featured ditty is "Gone With the Draft," written by the King Cole Trio who recently appeared at Paul Young's.

Judge George Neilson of Police Court is by way of being an amateur expert in the intricate workings of the novachord. He frequently brings out-of-town friends to the Rainbow Room, always makes a point of showing them how Milton Davis' novachord operates.

UNDERGRADS' JAMBOREE. Now that youngsters are coming home from Duke, Dartmouth, Princeton and other spots of learning, they're making Lounge Riviera an afterdark headquarters. Ida Clarke devoted all her interludes to college songs the other eve and each one evoked a rousing vocal accompaniment from the young customers . . . South American dancing was demonstrated bewitchingly in Riviera the other eve by two beauteous Argentine lasses now visiting Elaine Darlington. The party included Elaine, her brother Cully, Tinsley Adams and Middleton Traian . . . Maestro Pete Macias says that the handsomest Riviera event so far this season was the big dinner party given for soon-to-be-wed Nancy Hoskinson and James M. E. O'Grady. Almost all of Washington's upper-bracket junior socialites were at one big table while their elders occupied a smaller table.

THE LONELY BEARD. Representative George Holden Tinkham, who has been described as "a man looking for something in a bush," dropped into the Mayflower Lounge for a whirl at dancing the other eve. Someone mentioned the retirement of Chief Justice Hughes and Tinkham rubbed his beard lovingly and said, "My beard's about the only one left in public life."

ABOUT YOUNG LEDDIES. Valentina, Madrillon's new singer, is one of the most stunning decorations we've ever seen on a local bandstand. Her face seems to have been designed by Benda and when it's topped by a flowered white satin turban a la Carmen Miranda—o-o-oh! . . . Virginia Joy, of the Silver Fox, was born and schooled in Washington, but after being away for a couple of years says she can hardly find her way around our transformed town . . . Eileen George of the Anchor Room is wearing an ensemble to end all ensembles. It's of peach and cream linen with a hundred of so buttons up and down the front and has a big bag and flaring hat to match . . . Cecilia Osso, songstress of Ciro's Famous Village, has the most mobile and expressive big black eyes you'll ever see. It's amusing to watch them change expression as they meet the green-blue eyes of her B. F., Bill Masterson.

KEN FOY, pianist with Paul Kain's orchestra in Glen Echo's Spanish Ballroom

Dick Wilson's new band on the Starlight Roof will broadcast their music every Tuesday and Thursday at 11:30. The radio sample will probably send you scurrying up for a full evening of Starlight rhythm.

UNBELIEVABLE BUT TRUE. Hi Hat's pianist, Sandy Ross, says that ever since he fell off a horse a couple of years ago, he hasn't been able to smell or taste very well . . . Singer Van Taylor of Restaurant "823" has a sombrero that's bigger than he is, and he tips the scales at around 300. It's wide as an office desk and has a skyscraper crown woven in red and white stripes like a barber pole . . . Arthur Marchisio, greeter of the Pall Mall Room, vows that his new "Follow Me" cooler is as harmless as it is refreshing. Not a thing in it but rye, rum, pernod and a tasty slathering of fruit salad and mint . . . The big-hearted Plymouth management serves its cocktails in champagne glasses which automatically makes them double size . . . You can set your watch by the wired music in Hogate's. Just keep your eyes on the program which comes in on the dot . . . Psychic Leo of the Mayfair told us a few weeks ago that there'd soon be a drastic change in the Supreme Court. And look what's happened!

A PRIZE MOTHER-IN-LAW is Mrs. Denota Mareffa who's m. i. l. to Dick Ashby, owner of Dick's Grill. She makes all of the spaghetti sauce used in Dick's Grill right in her own kitchen according to a fine old Italian recipe. The freshly made sauce is brought down to Dick's every day.

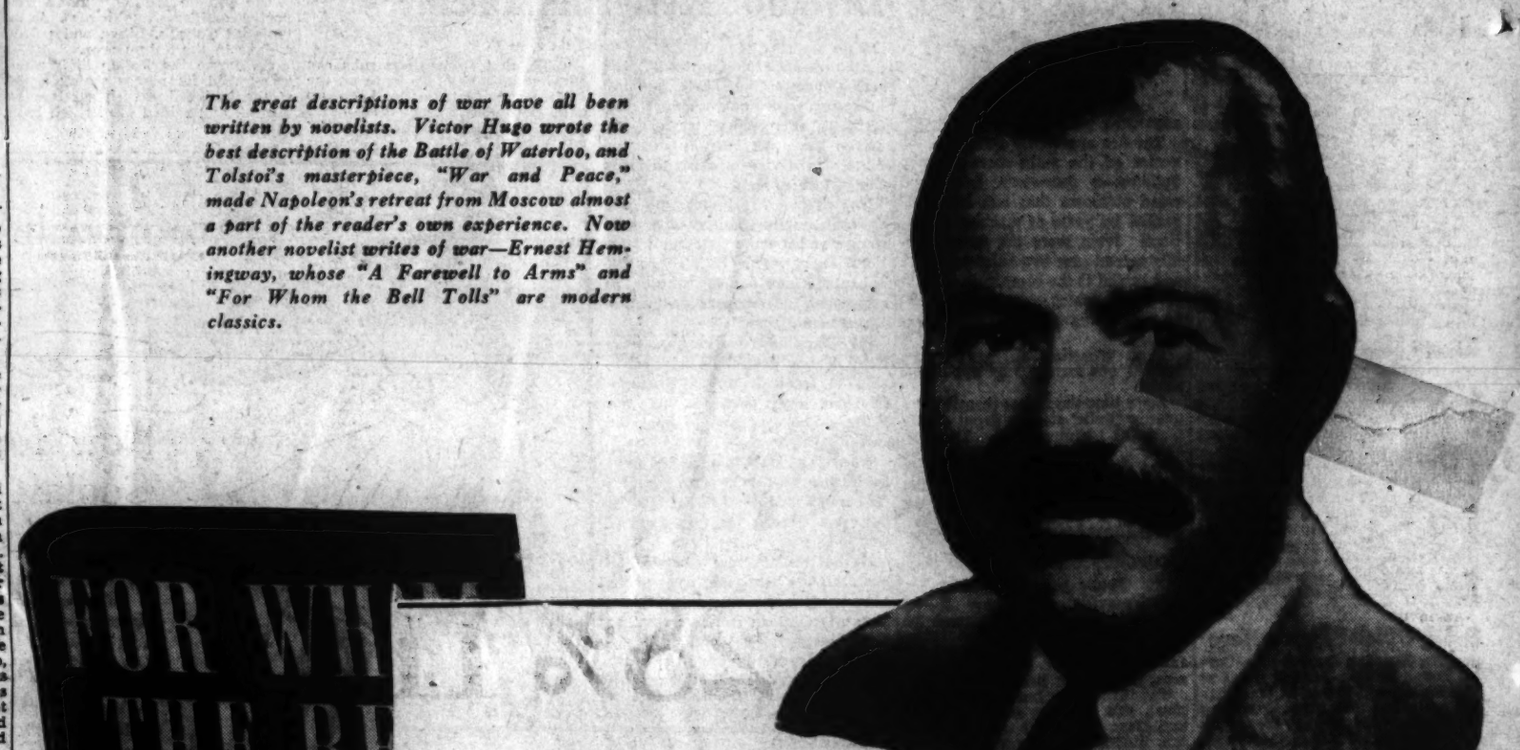
Writes About The Far East In

THE WASHINGTON POST

The great descriptions of war have all been written by novelists. Victor Hugo wrote the best description of the Battle of Waterloo, and Tolstoi's masterpiece, "War and Peace," made Napoleon's retreat from Moscow almost a part of the reader's own experience. Now another novelist writes of war—Ernest Hemingway, whose "A Farewell to Arms" and "For Whom the Bell Tolls" are modern classics.



IF YOU have read "A Farewell to Arms" or "For Whom the Bell Tolls" you know these things about Ernest Hemingway.

He knows war.

He knows people.

He knows how to write.

These form the perfect combination for a war correspondent. Hemingway has been one before. He recently returned to the job by flying across the Pacific to report the war in the Far East. He followed the armies. He interviewed the political leaders. He talked to the common people. He got the story of what is going on across the Pacific and what it means to America.

Washington will talk about these articles. Read them all—they start Tuesday in The Post.

a-quart milk distribution excludes many indigent women and children.

That a greater number of outlets are needed.

That the quantities of milk eligibles may buy are too rigorously limited.

As the May meeting mapped out the field of the low-cost surplus milk problem, today's gathering is expected to take definite action on some of the questions within the field.

The District Nutrition Committee is an official unit of the national setup of State nutrition committees under the sponsorship of the Federal Security Agency.

Mrs. Elizabeth O. Grant, nutritionist of the District Health Department, is chairman of the committee. Dr. Margaret Nicholson, pedidrician, is chairman of th special subcommittee trying to arrange low cost milk for all the District needy.

Acceptances to invitations to today's meeting were received from O. M. Reed, chief of the dairy division of the Surplus Marketing Administration; Paul Edwards, WPA Administrator for the District; and acting Welfare Director Conrad Van Hyning, it was announced yesterday.

An invitation was extended also to B. B. Derrick, of the Maryland-Virginia Milk Producers Association.

of motor fuel stored in four tanks. Had the flames reached these the yacht would have blown up, police said.

The fireboat Firefighter responded to the alarm, with No. 7 Engine Company and No. 10 Truck Company under Battalion Chief F. G. Berry. While the fireboat played water on the flames from a distance of 10 feet, the other fire companies laid 1,700 feet of hose along the pier to reach the blaze.

25 Feet of Stern Burned

Twenty-five feet of the Navajo's stern burned, with principal damage to the after sleeping quarters and deck, before the flames were extinguished.

Aboard, in addition to Mr. and Mrs. Cissel and Ray, was Mrs. Lane Thomas, 235 East Twenty-second Street, New York City. The yacht carried a crew of three: Benjamin Fenwick, captain; Albert Kearey, steward, and an engineer.

Three children survive Cissel at his home, 3700 Massachusetts Avenue Northwest. They are Vivian, 14; John, 18, and Susan, 20.

He was born in Kensington, Md., and grew up in the Washington area. He was a former vice president of the Metropolitan Bank of New York. About 1925 he returned to Washington to enter the real estate business.

Policeman's Steel Steed Throws Him, But He Gets Man

Policeman William Crawford, of the Montgomery County police, yesterday sighted a car he thought was being operated recklessly. He called to the driver to stop. Instead, the car speeded up.

"Bill" gave chase, but his motorcycle threw him off near the Rockville, Md., courthouse. Despite a severe face cut, a bruised shoulder and shock, he hailed Fire Chief W. Valentine Wilson and continued the chase in Wilson's car.

Last night, Robert Hepbron, colored, of Rockville, was charged with reckless driving and operating without a permit. Officer Crawford went home for repairs.

Albright Marks 15th Year With Service List 1st—in Tent

Unless the Bible goes hand in hand with the machine age, civilization faces continued "moral retrogression," the Rev. George E. Schnabel warned yesterday.

He addressed Albright Memorial Evangelical Church's fifteenth anniversary service, held under a tent, as were the first services on the present site at Fourth and Rittenhouse Streets Northwest. A modern church edifice now stands there.

The tent didn't leak, and there were no mud puddles to step over, as on that rainy opening day in 1926, but the anniversary services otherwise followed the original program.

Used Old Collection Plates

Members of today's congregation, including several charter members, yesterday sang one of the original services' hymns—"Faith of Our Fathers," dropped their collection into old pie plates used at that time, and followed the liturgical service order of that day.

Mrs. Carl D. Houchins, 20, who as 5-year-old Mildred Smoot was the first and only child baptized by Mr. Schnabel at the first services, yesterday stood with her husband before the original font and had her own child baptized. He was 3½-month-old William Daniel Houchins. Mrs. Houchins also was the first child to join the Albright Sunday school class.

Among other original members on hand yesterday were John D. Smoot, Mrs. Houchin's grandfather, and first secretary of the Albright Sunday school; Harry Garner and daughter, Eleanor; Mrs. Elwood Graham, Mrs. Dovie Titus and son, Colby; Mrs. Charlotte Howard, Mrs. E. E. Adamson and Mrs. Bertha Darby.

Tribute Paid Founders

In contrast with the impromptu choir that the Rev. Mr. Schnabel rounded up for his first service, vested and well-trained singers of both the young people's and adult choirs sang at the anniversary service. Mrs. Martha Boyd MacConnell directed. Mrs. Rhea McIntyre was organist.

In his introductory remarks, Mr. Schnabel paid tribute to the church's founders, calling them "loyal and devoted souls who have made this venture possible." He recalled that they rallied around him in the project when he came to Manor Park as a total stranger in 1926.

Announcement that the Poole family would soon leave to take up residence in Bermuda added a touch of sadness to the services, since the Pooles have been active in the congregation for several years. The father, Leroy Poole, already has sailed; Mrs. Poole and her twin children, Dona Lee and Leroy, jr., will leave this weekend. The family will be honored at this Friday's anniversary dinner.

Minnie Frost Rands' biblical drama, "The Prince of Peace," was presented last night. The Shangri-La Christian Endeavor Society held its meeting in the tent, and the Men's Brotherhood will sponsor a program in it tomorrow night.

than the average of the 4 other largest-selling brands tested—less than any of them—according to independent scientific tests of the smoke itself!

YOU'VE GOT the right answer there, Ralph Flanagan. Camel's slower way of burning means more coolness, naturally. More flavor, too, for nothing dulls flavor and fragrance like excess heat.

And what a treat to a tired smoking taste a cool, flavorful Camel can be . . . how welcome Camel's extra mildness—extra freedom from nicotine in the smoke. Get Camels. For economy and convenience, buy Camels by the carton.

It's Ralph Flanagan—swimmer of the world's fastest mile—lighting up that All-American mildness favorite, a slow-burning Camel

THERE's only one Ralph Flanagan—only a limited few who can even give him a good race. But, as a smoker, he's no different from millions of others when he tells you:

"Camel is the cigarette that is extra mild—easy on my throat—and has a flavor that doesn't wear out its welcome."

Yes, in every walk of life—in the ranks of the Army and Navy, too—the brand that clicks is the flavorful cigarette that is extra mild with less nicotine in the smoke. Science confirms this advantage of less nicotine (see left, above), but get Camels and smoke out the facts about mildness for yourself. The smoke's the thing!

Into Syria

Hitherto the British have always permitted the Nazis to get the jump on them. That happened in Norway, the Low Countries, the Balkan Peninsula and, most recently, Crete. In each instance there may have been sound political and strategic reasons why the British found it necessary to remain on the defensive and to act only after the enemy had struck. But the consequences of allowing Germany to retain the initiative have been disastrous. Now, however, for the first time the British have turned the tables on the enemy, and the scene is in Syria.

For some weeks German "tourists," technicians, propagandists, fliers and ground crews have been reported as filtering into Syria and Lebanon. How far this "silent" occupation has gone is not certain. The French have repeatedly insisted that no German troops were in the mandated area. If by this is meant ground troops, their denials may be right though disingenuous. Such troops usually constitute the last, not the first, stage in a Nazi occupation. The British, therefore, would have been foolish to wait until the Germans had so thoroughly established themselves in Syria as to make any effort to dislodge them difficult and perhaps impossible. Accordingly a column of British and Free French troops have moved into Syria from Trans-Jordan and appear to be in possession of Suweidah in the Jebel Druze area. There, incidentally, the population is very largely pro-British. Other Allied columns are said to be moving on Syria from Palestine and Iraq, and an effort is being made by the British to enlist the support of Syrians and Lebanese by offering them complete independence.

The venture has constructive possibilities for the British. Should they succeed fully in establishing themselves in Syria and Lebanon, their grip on the Eastern Mediterranean, which has been weakened by the loss of Crete, would be considerably strengthened. And a German drive via Syria, Iraq and Palestine to Suez and the Persian Gulf would be made impossible. But the situation is complicated by the attitude of Vichy, France. The bitter denunciation of the British and Free French move by Marshal Petain and the order given by the Vichy government to Gen. Dentz to resist the British move into Syria by all possible means creates the possibility that an Anglo-French struggle —and one which may not be confined to the Near East—is in the offing. This the British must risk. In view of the determination of Vichy actively to assist the Third Reich in the creation of the "new order," a development against which Secretary Hull has strongly protested, the British would appear to be justified in taking the risk of offending Vichy in order to forestall Hitler, from whom the Vichy government now openly takes orders. If ever Nelson's advice that "the boldest measures are the safest" were applicable, it is now. The road to Iran and India lies through Syria, and Britain has no option but to take time by the forelock, and get athwart it.

Food Prices

Federal indictments charging price-fixing and monopolistic control have been brought against five important branches of the food industry in California. The mass trust action marks another milestone in Thurman Arnold's drive to lower food prices for consumers and to raise them for growers by curbing some of the practices of processors and distributors. In this instance the defendants are fruit and vegetable canneries, rice processors and distributors, and the dried fruit, dried milk and sardine industries. The companies, involved, many of which have been under the persistent fire of consumer groups in California, doubtless had sufficient warning that Mr. Arnold was about to get around to them. But the timing of the indictments, which were returned the day after the Assistant Attorney General arrived in San Francisco on his national tour, is most strategic from the defense standpoint. On the one hand, the Administration is in the process of easing the country over the shock of anticipated material shortages for civilian purposes—fewer automobiles, gasoline and oil rationing, restricted production of refrigerators, washing machines, and so on. On the other, the Justice Department is seeking to insure, in so far as it is able, fairer food prices. In ordinary times such a stand ought to be taken for granted. In the present emergency, however, the public has every right to expect specific and frequent evidence of the Administration's determination to maintain equitable prices. Our lack of a wage or a farm policy makes the outlook in this respect more than a little cloudy. Yet a remedy for this lack is the only way in which civilian sacrifices of nonessentials are likely to be palatable.

Polish Horror

Jan Ciechanowski, the Polish Ambassador, in a letter to Secretary Hull accompanying the latest White Paper on conditions in Poland, concludes that the Nazi method of exterminating Poland is being "pursued in a manner unprecedented in the annals of human history." Such a conclusion is substantiated from the record of the White Paper which was summarized in a copyrighted article in yesterday's Post. It is a horror story which would be incredible but for its careful documentation. Some of the details are too gross for polite reading, and are not to be found in our summary, but they deserve a full reading at a time when the air has been filled again with a Nazi peace offensive. For this grim recital will give the reader a case study of the Weltanschauung, or philosophy, of the Nazi state in action.

This philosophy uses lies and the gullibility of other people as the means of revolutionizing and brutalizing the world on the Nazi model. The progress of one lie may be followed from this and past White Papers. First there was the soothing syrup of September, 1938, when the Poles were being softened for the slaughter. Adolf Hitler then rebound himself to respect the ten-year peace treaty with Poland. "Here," he said, "the road to understanding had to be found, and it was found." He went on to forecast the constant improvement of relations. For, he said, "we are two peoples. They shall live. One cannot annihilate the other. I recognize this, and we must see it: a state of 33,000,000 people will always strive for an outlet to the sea." Within a year, however, the soft words had been forgotten. Poland suddenly found herself faced with ultimatums, and then her territory was invaded. Yet even after the invasion Gen. von Brauchitsch, commander in chief of the German forces invading Poland, declared "The German forces do not consider the inhabitants as enemies. Every rule of international law will be observed." The latest White Paper now provides the apotheosis of this particular lie's progress—one country in process of annihilating the other without any regard for any kind of law or any canon of decency.

In "Mein Kampf," Adolf Hitler, in sovereign contempt for the individual says that the masses "quickly forget." They do. But, in order to help them forget, Hitler makes his evil policy assume all manner of appealing shapes with which to beguile the unwary. In this deception he is helped by the fact that the people, eager for peace, try to forget. But we shall forget the intrinsic badness of Hitlerism only at our peril. The Polish story shows that if we seek to accommodate within the veins of the world community a virus of such hideousness, it will end up by destroying us, too.

More Navy

The urgency of the naval shipbuilding program was skillfully dramatized Saturday at the launching at Camden of the 35,000-ton battleship, South Dakota. Almost before her splash in the Delaware had subsided, a giant crane lowered a cruiser keel onto the same ways. Moreover, the festivities attending the launching in June, 1940, of her sister ships, the Washington and the North Carolina, were dispensed with. Only invited guests were present, speeches were brief, and the launching was held during the lunch hour so that employes could watch and yet not hold up new work. "Time is ticking away," Secretary Knox warned, and the brevity of the ceremony emphasized his point. But the real drama of the occasion lay in the simple fact that the South Dakota will join the fleet seven to eight months ahead of contract schedule. Turrets, guns and superstructure remain to be fitted, but the $70,000,000 superdreadnaught, already in a considerably more advanced stage of construction than are most battleships when launched, should put to sea early in 1942, if not before.

We shall then have a battle line of 18 capital ships, the three latest of which, the Navy declares, will be the most powerful afloat. Naval experts are fond of pointing out the importance of numerical superiority in battleships. They figure, for example, that a fleet of 10 capital ships opposing an enemy fleet of 7 has favoring odds of 100 to 49 at the beginning of an engagement—a ratio which should rise, toward the end of the fight, to 1,000 to 343. The American battle line admittedly has the greatest firing power and the greatest armor protection. Moreover, it far outnumbers the Japanese line, known to be at least 9 battleships and possibly 11. In these circumstances, the recent shift of units of the Pacific fleet to the Atlantic may not have as serious an effect upon the striking ability of Uncle Sam in the Far East as some authorities have hinted. Certainly the shift was necessary. For it has been apparent for some time back that the Atlantic battle force, consisting for the most part of the oldest and least powerful ships of the line, has been pitifully inadequate.

Cost-Plus

The much criticized cost-plus contracts which the Government negotiated during World War I not only covered production costs but also allowed contractors to compute their fees as a fixed percentage of such costs. The result was to put a positive premium upon waste and extravagance. The higher the costs, the larger the fees. Today defense contracts are being negotiated on the basis of cost-plus-fixed fees. Such a system is superior to the old cost-plus system, though the fixed-fee system also encourages wasteful outlays, or at least weakens the contractor's resistance to increased outlays. The reason is that he is assured of a definite return from the Government, whether production costs are high or low. For example, he need not worry if the prices of materials and equipment are boosted, or workers demand higher wages. For these extra costs can just be shifted to the Government and ultimately to the taxpayers.

Representative Engel is probably justified, therefore, in claiming that huge sums have been dissipated in building Army cantonments because of the leeway allowed contractors under these cost-plus fixed-fee contracts. At any rate, his arguments sounded plausible enough to the House last week. And the Congressmen voted a rider to the pending Army appropriation bill outlawing this kind of contract for cantonment construction and making lump-sum payments mandatory. In seeking to curb an abuse, Mr. Engel has, however, suggested a dangerously obstructionist remedy. This was in the mind of Representative Woodrum when he voted against the amendment. Mr. Woodrum is a stanch advocate of economy, but he fears that under the Engel amendment the advantage of economy might be more than offset by the delay in defense work. It must be admitted that this argument has considerable weight. Though contractors have little incentive under the fixed-fee system to keep their costs at a minimum, nevertheless the arrangement does make it possible to speed up defense projects. This will be obvious after a moment's thought. Many contractors would be extremely reluctant to undertake work if they did not have full protection against sudden advances in wages and in material costs. Moreover, they require an assurance of reasonable profits—an assurance which is lacking under a system of lump-sum payments unless the lump sum itself makes generous allowance for all contingencies.

In any case the mounting costs of the defense program are not going to be held in check by trying to make contractors assume risks that they ought not to be expected to shoulder under the unstable conditions now prevailing. The wastes and excessive costs of defense projects trace back to causes much more fundamental than the form of contracts. They are due to the Government's failure to establish adequate controls over the prices of strategic supplies and raw materials. Also there is the factor of the absence of restraints, voluntary or compulsory, upon demands for higher wages. Unless or until effective controls are established over these basic cost factors, Congress might as well resign itself to witnessing a steady rise in the cost of defense projects. Putting pressure upon the contractor would merely hamper defense preparations without getting at the root of the trouble.

SAILOR'S HOUSE

This staunch little house
Built into the hill
Has a brook below it,
And great boughs fill
The slope above it
With sounds like the sea
On far white beaches
Of memory.

The old man who owned it,
So neighbors say,
Sailed on clipper ships
In his day . . .
The sailing ship's picture
Upon the wall
Started me thinking
About it all.

The prow is wearing
A wreath of foam
And the sails are bright clouds
Bound for home . . .
But something here
Makes it seem to me
That I look through a window
On ship and sea!

Test Of Sacrifice

My objectives in this war can be summarized briefly:

1. To keep Hitlerism out of America.
2. To keep Britain alive as a military outpost.
3. To end the expansion of Hitler's power.
4. To proceed from there with the methodical smashing of naziism.
5. To replace naziism with the twin rules of law and security.

To do these things I am ready to accept sacrifice. Millions of Americans are. The test of sacrifice is that it must be universal and it must lead to the objectives listed. It must be imposed by a government that knows what it is doing. A people, convinced of its government's sincerity toward these ends, will respond with all its heart.

The early sacrifices being suggested do not meet these tests. Gasolineless Sundays and colder houses are not consistent with American tankers laden with oil for Japan. The donation of household aluminum while the Army squanders new aluminum for nonessential purposes cannot be taken seriously.

Morale is created by deeds—not words. Sacrifice becomes a mockery when its first cause is lack of national vision.

If there is doubt about resentment as expressed here, let The Post submit two questions in an opinion poll of its own:

1. Would you make actual sacrifice in your standards of living if you were sure you were contributing to the defeat of Hitler?
2. Are you convinced that the sacrifices now being suggested are intended to aid in the defeat of Hitler?

The popular response, I suggest, would be enlightening to the President.

'Peace At Any Price'

There is a fine letter in The Post of May 30 by L. C. Farrar on "Right of Self Defense." I agree with everything in the letter. "Real Christians are always brave," she says.

Christianity is not now, and never has been a "peace at any price" approach to life. Peace at any price people are hiding smugly behind those who are determined to fight to the death for the survival of right and justice, as they always have done. We fight so that they may dream on.

And they are so smug about wanting peace as though there were something very refined about it. Everyone with any cultural ideas at all desires a peaceful atmosphere in which he may develop with some degree of profit and comfort his natural talents! But when someone tries to take his possessions away from him, if he hasn't got the guts to try to the best of his ability to hold on to them, then, in my opinion, he deserves to lose them, and make no mistake about it, he will lose them.

Most of us desire above all things to have peace and quiet so that we may continue to do without interruption the things we like to do. But don't try to take anything away from me that I feel that I have earned the right to hold! I love peace, but when anyone tries to infringe upon my rights, all my ideas of peace fly out of the window and I will fight with any weapon at hand. And I don't expect anyone else to fight my battles for me.

My observation leads me to believe that a great many of the people who sincerely think that they believe in peace really believe in personal security for themselves and the devil take the hindmost.

Nazi Intentions

So Hitler has declared that he has no intention of invading America! Let's cancel our defense appropriations, send our draftees home, let the strikers in our airplane plants strike on and on! The Readers Digest has already assured us that Hitler can't invade America, and now the Great Dictator himself says such a thought has never even entered his head! What's more, he has too high an opinion of American intelligence and good sense—bless his kind heart—to believe that Americans could seriously entertain such an idea. So let's eat, drink and be merry. We have nothing to fear. No, nothing more than Austria, Poland, Denmark, Norway and Holland had when they received the same reassurances. "Americans," Goering told Van Paassen, "we all know, are the most unsuspecting people in the world." Evidently Herr Hitler has this same opinion of us!

De Valera

The cadaverous cartoon in The Post depicting De Valera as Hamlet gives powerful impulse to the belief that shame is the fate of those who hesitate through weakness or fear. From Ankara in Turkey comes word that the German penetration of Crete was not a rehearsal for an invasion of Britain, but rather an essay on doing the same toward Ireland. Many of us feel that a successful invasion of Britain is impossible owing to the magnitude of the defense. Ireland has nothing to offer as a defense. The philosophy of De Valera is sound on paper, plausible to the unthinking, but vacuous to reason.

The Vichy government believes Germany is going to win, because it wants German victory, owing to its hatred of England. Is it possible that Dublin is beginning to believe in a Hitler victory? This gives rise to the query, can Dublin be duped? The dreary list of Hitler's broken promises, "no mixing in the internal affairs of Austria" then after Sudeten no more problems," nothing for Norway to "worry about," "we want lasting peace," all promises followed by the Balkan robbery—invasion by Greece, now on the threshold of Syria.

The Irish answer of some being "Hitler will be no worse than England has been in the past." These men seem unwilling to believe that any promises England will make in the future to Eire will bear the full indorsement of the United States.

De Valera may delay too long. It may be too late when the German parachutists are decending on Irish valleys, to experience a change of heart. You can't argue with a machine gun nor ask for a joint debate with an armored tank.

'What Can We Do?'

Pray tell me what can an American do to help rid his country of its apathy, to make it realize that we are facing a national shipwreck if we refuse to see the rocks ahead? There must be millions of Americans asking the same question. What can we do to wake up America before it is too late?

We see sabotage practiced against us on all sides. We see our efforts in national defense go up in smoke, down Davy Jones' locker, or otherwise made useless. We are advised by radio and press that saboteurs are active throughout the Nation, and "we ain't seen nothing yet." We see $25,000,000 worth of defense effort go up in one bonfire. No statement that "there is no evidence of sabotage" is going to kid us. We know Hitler and Stalin have been dealing the cards again.

We see strikes running wild throughout the Nation. Our defense efforts are mired or halted entirely by unscrupulous un-American union leaders. A few rule the many. Labor is getting in ill-repute. And we Americans know that Hitler and Stalin are winning more tricks.

We see that portion of our defense program that is permitted to proceed moving ahead at a snail's pace. We see red tape clogging our wheels of progress, inefficiency hindering us at every step. Every plodding stride we take permits totalitarian powers an added lead in their struggle for world domination.

What can we Americans do? We want our aid to Britain to reach its destination. We want our defense program to proceed without stoppage through strikes. We want our defense efforts secure from sabotage. We want the red tape cut, and our production to go into high gear. How can we Americans get our wants realized? We are willing to fight and die for this democracy of ours. Pray God, must the wealth of this Nation be forever poured into armaments? Or else must we cease to survive as free Americans, must we give up our American way of life because a democracy cannot act in an emergency?

What can we do before it is too late to do anything?

Should The FBI Take Action?

Is it not time for Federal authorities, notably the FBI, to take decisive action in regard to Mr. Charles Lindbergh?

The right of free speech has in no way been abrogated by the President's Proclamation of a Declaration of Unlimited Emergency, and yet his action was a clear call that this is too critical a period for the luxury of internal dissension. All the arguments pro and con have been debated and aired for many months and it is no secret where the majority opinion lies.

Lindbergh has taken one step past his privilege of free speech and stepped openly and flagrantly into the realm of treason and political chicanery. One sentence alone in his speech in Philadelphia on May 9 will serve as an example. I quote: "Is it not time for us to turn to new policies and to a new leadership?"

On the one hand, Lindbergh berates the Administration for not following what he considers to be democratic principles, and on the other he openly requests his dubious followers to change leaders. And by what methods? The sinister implication is only too clear.

Up to now, some persons might have had reason to suppose that Lindbergh was a sincere patriot, only a pacifist who sincerely hates war and violence, ready to join the defensive forces of the Nation as soon as the elected President of all the people indicated that necessity. But now he stands fully revealed to even the most simple-minded as an exponent of the Nazi scheme of things, pledged to carry out, and not unwittingly, the principle of Hitler's statement in "Mein Kampf," to wit, that "it would be easy to produce dissension and rioting in the United States at the right moment."

By asking for a change of leaders, Lindbergh has laid himself open to arrest on a charge of treason and incitement to revolution, and I, for one, hope that our Government will no longer hesitate to take him in hand, and forget the fears that such action might make a martyr of him. It is my belief that American citizens such as Lindbergh do more harm than even the cleverest German spy or saboteur. The same goes for Messrs. John T. Flynn and Senator Burton K. Wheeler, all of whom have expressed the same idea, namely, "Is it not time for us to turn to new policies and to a new leadership?"

The answer of the majority to this query is: "It is time to core the maggot from the apple."

The Post Impressionist

A Physician's Casebook

The saga of the country doctor has been immortalized in books and on the screen countless times. Equally as rich in human interest and drama, though perhaps less heralded, is the story of the Washington physician. Over his threshold have passed Presidents, Ambassadors, Senators, generals, merchant princes, and Indian fighters.

When Abraham Lincoln was President, his physician was Dr. Robert King Stone, who also treated the President's secretary, John H. Nicolay, and his messenger, Cornelius O'Leary. To Dr. Stone's office at 232 F Street there came, in the years between 1850 and 1870, John Sherman, statesman; Hancock, Meade, and Logan, Civil War generals; Edwin M. Stanton, Secretary of War; Kit Carson, the Indian fighter; Roger Brooke Taney, Chief Justice of the United States; Whitelaw Reid, journalist and diplomat, and William H. Bennett. The doctor's surrey was frequently seen at the hitching posts of the Capital's leading hostelries: Willards', National, Metropolitan, Union and Woodbine House. Although he specialized in diseases of the eye and ear (he was professor of ophthalmic and aural surgery at the National Medical College), his practice ranged from surgery of the eye to killing tooth nerves.

Browsing in a Washington bookshop recently, I found three of the doctor's casebooks, bound in brown leather, 3 by 9 inches in size. In the doctor's own handwriting are cases which show his fight against child infant fever, malarial influenza, Falmouth fever, dysentery, and smallpox. Medicine has advanced far since the days when he prescribed mustard leaves on the spine for neuralgia and King's Hospital Paint for chronic coughs, but his habit of close observation, his accuracy in diagnosis, and his keen sense of humor are characteristic of fine doctors throughout the ages.

A scrutiny of these casebooks makes delightful reading, as witness the following entries:

"(Thursday, January 9, 1863) Mrs. A. R., clerk United States Treasury. Says she has dyspepsia from her monotonous life. A nervous person who is confined to close air and that is all.

(Tuesday, April 5, 1863) Col. L. Been drinking heavily for two days. Prescribed a glass of good whisky every three or four hours.

"(Wednesday, April 20, 1863). Prescribed for W. R. Disease, disordered stomach. Didn't return. Either dead, cured, or disgusted.

"(Sunday, May 1, 1863). Prescribed for Miss T., White House. Disease, La Grippe. To be paid, $10, which will never be paid. Dead beat! No good! Found her so much improved that with a few parting instructions left for good.

"(Friday, June 5, 1864). Mrs. C., Uniontown over Anacostia. Found her in an attack of hysteria. Gave her assafoetida pills. Had her undressed and put to bed. Cause, a nagging husband. Had long talk with husband. He told me his wife had been in Dr. Franklin's asylum on account of drink and that now he had every reason to suspect that she had gone back to her old habits. Mrs. C. acknowledged to me that she had been drinking patent medicines. Could only give her some good advice to leave all such drugs alone.

"(July 1, 1864). Prescribed for P. G. F. Fracture at elbow. Thanks from ignorant people are at best a surprise, but when they begin to put on airs, I can't stand it, and won't. They not being satisfied, have notified them I will not be in the case any longer.

("Saturday, August 8, 1864). Prescribed for Miss B. Disease, cholera morbus. One of the many trials a young doctor meets with. Had ordered hydrong cho. mite fr iij and d. and before she could get them down vomited them all up and I was discharged. Our Heavenly Father wouldn't suit such people!

("Thursday, February 2, 1865). Mr. P. Disease, colic. Young middy. First vacation. Ate too much. Vomited him and then gave Squibbs. Left him loose and easy.

("Saturday, February 4, 1865). Prescribed for John H. Nicolay, Esq. Trouble, defective vision. Has noticed his sight is being impaired. In addition to his heavy official duties as the President's secretary, Mr. Nicolay has been studying steadily at night for some time. Sight appears shorter, things dimmer. Asthenopia from excessive use of organs.

("Tuesday, May 3, 1865). Hon. T. S., Ebbitt House. Found him lying dead drunk in rotunda with cut back of head. Had him moved to bed. Cut being small, did nothing to it. Gave spr. ammon, aromat.

("Monday, August 7, 1865). W. C. Child about 5 or 6. Has been deaf for 14 months immediately after a sickness resulting from eating hot potpie.

("Thursday, October 13, 1865). Prescribed for Mrs. H. L. Constant pain in head. Remarks: Has nine children.

("Tuesday, January 5, 1867). J. W. V. Child of 6 months. Remarks: Six days after birth had convulsions for five days and nights. A week after, lump began on right side anterior fontanel. Gradually went on till today. Circumference of head, 23½ inches. From tip of ear to tip of ear, across head, 13½ inches. From occipital bone behind to nasal, 15 inches. He is a splendid child and as large as a child of 15 months old. Very tall and notices things more than children at that age or one year old. Head is well ossified, unusually so. Forehead is very large, 4½ inches by 5½ inches. Child is very bright and intelligent.

("Saturday February 27, 1868). General Kit Carson. Black hair, earthy face, piercing eyes. Breathes heavily. Complained of laryngeal suffocation which was very severe at times, coughing, and a bad inflammation of the right side of his neck. Diagnosis: dyspnoea laryngeal aphonia. Valvular insufficiency. Aneurism of arch of aorta or innominata artery. Impulse of heart fair on side of right clavicle, very little on left side."

A footnote at the bottom of this page in the casebook notes that "General Kit Carson died at Fort Lyon, Colo., March 23, 1868, from rupture of artery in the neck."

Labor Cleans House

By Ernest K. Lindley

Time To Get Tough

LINDLEY

THE MOST SIGNIFICANT labor news in several weeks probably is C. I. O. President Philip Murray's terrific verbal crackdown on "Mickey" Orton, president of the International Woodworkers of America. It indicates that the national leadership of the C.I.O. is ready to get tough with obstreperous radical elements in its organization. And it comes close to putting the active force of the national leadership of the C. I. O. behind the President's request that the recommendations of the Defense Mediation Board be accepted by both labor and employers.

Privately, responsible leaders in all branches of labor admit that the time has come to get "tough." They know that if they do not get tough, Congress will. And, unquestionably, they recognize, on the average, fully as much as industrial leaders the nature of the peril that requires uninterrupted and increased production of armaments.

Responsible labor leaders, both in A. F. of L. and C. I. O., assert privately that the Orton case is as clear an example of the compelling need for toughness as anyone could imagine. His demands, on behalf of some 12,000 Puget Sound loggers, were presented from the first as an all-or-nothing proposition. A strike was called. In his relations with the Defense Mediation Board, he talked one way inside the room and another way outside. He did not, in the opinion of responsible labor leaders, keep his promise to present the recommendations of the board to his membership in an unbiased way—and of course he did not urge acceptance. And he ended by calling the board a union-busting outfit.

WHETHER OR NOT it is true that Orton, as it is alleged, is a Communist, responsible labor leaders are satisfied that he acts like one. A contrast was provided by the concurrent demands made by the Columbia River branch of the same union. This is headed up by Al Hartung, an old I. W. W. The "wobblies" were tough a generation ago, and perhaps some of them still are. But ideologically they have become mortal enemies of the Communists, and some of them have ripened into orthodox, if hard-bargaining, union leaders. Hartung got about three-fourths of what he asked without a strike, through the recommendation of the Defense Mediation Board. Experienced labor leaders who dealt with both Hartung and Orton report that the difference was apparent almost at a glance: one was interested chiefly in the wages and working conditions of his men, and the other obviously had an ulterior political motive.

The Communist influence in the C. I. O. may be numerically small, but it has been apparent on many occasions. During the organization period, Communists were only too often the most aggressive and best-equipped organizers. They knew such elementary things as how to keep books, to write pamphlets and translate them into various languages, and to get their own people elected to key positions.

It has been difficult to isolate and detect the Communist influence, however, even during the 20 months since Communist foreign policy did a flipflop to what called for "isolation" on the part of the United States with reference to Germany. In several instances where Communist influence was alleged, the Defense Mediation Board was able to obtain prompt settlements.

NOW THE Mediation Board—backed by the President—has been defied. Responsible national labor leaders are putting public as well as private pressure on at least some of the stiff-necked and possibly subversive leaders further down the line. If they fail, the President must act—or Congress will act more drastically and to the greater detriment of labor unions.

The President has been severely criticized for not dealing with labor with a heavier hand. There are many reasons why he has not done so. There were, first, the cases where employers for years had been resisting the plain law of the land concerning collective bargaining. There were, secondly, the legitimate demands of labor for increased wages resulting from expanding production and profits. These have been especially hard to deny in the absence of taxation severe enough to skim off all excess profits during the rearmament period. There was, thirdly, the paramount desire to preserve the private enterprise system, of which collective bargaining is an integral part. There was, fourthly, a recognition that while strikes got the headlines, and on several occasions have interfered seriously with defense production, far greater lags were due to other causes: such as the reluctance of manufacturers to give up normal business or to subcontract.

A SENSE of urgency has been lacking in almost all occupations. And the President has refused to blame labor while excusing others. He has realized also that C.I.O. leaders of the type of Sidney Hillman and Philip Murray have been harassed not only by Communist influences but by non-Communist influences which are isolationist and have found it politically useful to work with the left-wingers.

By patience and confidence in the indubitable patriotism of most of the leaders of labor, as well as of the rank and file of workers, the President has nursed the situation along. Now the responsible national leaders of labor themselves seem ready to crack down openly on subversive or unreasonable officials and workers. This is a very great gain. It means that drastic action can be taken where it is clearly needed, with the support of a great majority of union leadership and membership.

Blood, Sweat, Tears in U.S.?

Patterson, Smith Talk

By the United Press

Two high Administration leaders said yesterday the Nation faces the gravest threat in its history and warned that there will be sacrifices —"that we may have our measure of blood and sweat and tears."

Undersecretary of War Robert P. Patterson declared that "it may be" that war with Germany "is just around the corner." The United States faces the future unafraid, Patterson told the Rutgers University graduating class at New Brunswick, N. J.

"Of this we may be certain, that Hitler will wage war with us the instant it suits his plans," he went on. "And we may be certain that he will balk at nothing. That is the world we are facing. We cannot close our eyes and say that it is a pleasant world."

Budget Director Harold Smith said the Nation is faced with "the gravest threats in its history—military, psychological and economic."

Declaring that "the totalitarian blueprint" includes the Western Hemisphere, Smith said, "The best way to protect the security and integrity of our democracy is to accept the challenge presented by these threats . . . to prepare ourselves for defense on all fronts."

Smith Speaks in Kansas

Smith, in a nationally broadcast (NBC) address at seventy-fifth anniversary ceremonies of the University of Kansas at Lawrence, Kans., warned that a German triumph would provoke a vast upheaval that would bring economic enslavement to the world.

Touching on Franco-German collaboration, Patterson declared:

"France has been overborne and her leaders have become so physically and spiritually bankrupt that they have evidently undertaken to help her (Germany) enslave others."

Both Patterson and Smith ridiculed what they termed the "defeatist" theory that the Nation will lose its democracy if its fights for it; both criticized the "isolationist" position pursued by the United States after the World War and suggested that things might have been different today if this country had followed up the military triumph with concrete steps to preserve peace; both warned that the two oceans would become avenues of aggression if their control was in unfriendly hands.

Parallel Highlights

Here are some of the parallel highlights of their speeches:

War threat—Patterson: ". . . Hitler will wage war with us the instant it suits his plans . . . defeatist spokesmen among us say that we will lose our own democracy in event of war . . . we have been through many crises without loss of democracy and there is no cause for believing that we will not survive this crisis."

Smith: "The way of life which we have treasured is again threatened. The issue before us today is terribly practical and immediate . . . What we do here in the United States in this year of 1941 . . . may well determine the whole future course of history. Not alone for ourselves, but for the entire world . . . Recent events have proved that we cannot remain aloof. If we do not go out to meet world events on our own terms, then they will come battering at our very door."

"Full Measure of Service"

Sacrifices—Patterson: "America calls now for the full measure of service. We must all face the grim reality of today, conscious that there will be sacrifices, that we may have our measure of blood and sweat and tears, but fully determined that our America must live."

Smith: "We must be ready to make sacrifices. We must see that Hitler's inside job makes no headway."

Defense of democracy—Patterson: "Americans have always been willing to risk all that they have to preserve these (democratic) standards. The men of 1776, of 1861, of 1917 did not falter. And the men of 1941 face the future unafraid."

Smith: "We have defended it (democracy) before, only to have it emerge possessed of renewed strength and vigor . . . We shall not lose democracy by defending it; the risk lies in neglecting its defense."

America's Dilemmas

By Mark Sullivan

Conflict Of Desires

THE SPIRITUAL DISTRESS of America is caused by several dilemmas. Sometimes dilemmas can be solved by reasoning, by weighing and reflecting. This may or may not be possible with the dilemmas that now confront America. In any event it may help to state the principal dilemmas.

SULLIVAN

Dilemma No. 1: The contrasting horns here are (a) we wish to give utmost aid to Britain. And (b) we wish not to enter the war.

Now we just cannot have both these wishes. Utmost aid to Britain would include going to war.

The phrase I have used is "utmost aid." Some of our leaders use words even stronger, more inclusive. President Roosevelt has used the word "all-out." That same word was used by Mr. Wendell Willkie in his Chicago speech Friday night. He said he urged "all-out aid to Britain," and "every possible support to Britain."

Now in that speech as a whole Mr. Willkie made it clear he did not advocate entering the war. Yet the phrases he used would include entering the war. I imagine Mr. Willkie is quite clear in his own mind. I assume he means, aid short of war. He does not mean that America should enter the war.

BUT THE PUBLIC, not trained in legal reasoning, not experienced in discriminating choice of words, is not helped out of its own dilemma, but is confused further by such phrases as Mr. Willkie uses, and also Mr. Roosevelt.

Incidentally, the British public must be even more confused. When two outstanding political leaders in the United States, Mr. Roosevelt and Mr. Willkie, use such words as "all-out aid" and "every possible support," those phrases are cabled to Britain. They are printed in British headlines. The British public gets the idea that the United States, to help Britain, will enter the war. Presently, the British public will wonder why we are not in, will begin to feel reproach for our not being in.

Dilemma No. 2: (a) We wish to give some $7,000,000,000 worth of supplies to Britain—we have enacted this in our lease-lend law and we are making the goods. But (b) we wish not to run the risk involved in actually delivering these supplies to Britain.

WE REALIZE perfectly well that the supplies won't do Britain any good unless they are delivered to her. We know they cannot be delivered to her unless they are safely carried across the Atlantic. We know that under present conditions they cannot be safely carried, because so many cargo ships are being sunk by the Nazis. These sinkings the British navy is unable to prevent —actually the rate of sinkings is increasing sensationally. If the sinkings are to be checked, if supplies from the United States are to be safely delivered to Britain, the British navy must have help by the American Navy. But help by the American Navy would probably lead to war—and that we are not willing to face.

We ought to be clear about this. We are under no obligation to see that our supplies are safely delivered to Britain. All we have undertaken is to make the supplies and give them to Britain. The whole understanding was that Britain would come to America for the supplies and carry them home. That we should have no responsibility for delivering the supplies was made clear over and over in the debates on the lease-lend bill. Actually Congress took the word "transfer" out of the bill because "transfer" might mean delivery.

Britain understood this as we did. Weeks after the lease-lend bill was enacted, when the sinking of cargo ships became serious, Prime Minister Winston Churchill said in a speech that Britain had supposed America would put the supplies "within our reach." But the fact is we were careful not to give rise to any such supposition.

BUT ALL THIS legalistic reasoning does no real good. In the situation as it exists now, if our supplies are to be of full use to the British, our Navy must help protect the cargo ships that carry the supplies or in some equivalent way check the sinking of cargo ships. What we are up against now is our original dilemma. We wish to give utmost aid to Britain—but we wish not to enter the war. That pair of contrasting wishes, that bedevilling dilemma, will continue to torture us until we solve it ourselves. The way to solve it is to choose one wish, stick to it, and get rid of the other.

If you can tell which wish America as a whole will choose, you will know a good deal about the future. The choice is not in the world of reason, it is in the world of emotion, mass emotion. And it is difficult to imagine America saying to Britain, at some point, "We have now given you as much help as we are going to give, we stop at this point —even though we know that our stopping will result in your losing the war."

other aggressive steps are taken.

There is considerable confusion about the nature of an all-out system of shipping protection, chiefly arising from the President's repeated assertion that convoys are outmoded. The President is perfectly correct in his assertion, if he is understood as he unquestionably means to be—that convoying alone is no longer good enough. But what most uninformed persons have gathered from the President's words is far from being the truth. While combined air and naval action, and constant sweeping of the sea lanes are also highly important, it is still essential to accompany merchant ships crossing the Atlantic with protective escort vessels.

This is so because 50 per cent of the damage at sea is still done by the submarine. Constant, aggressive sweeping of the sealanes virtually removes the threat from commerce raiders, and greatly diminishes the threat from the long-range bombers, which together do the other 50 per cent of the damage. But the submarine is hardly susceptibe to a mere sweeping operation. If we had enough aircraft and warships to keep within range of most of the submarines at sea most of the time, a sweeping operation would be effective. Then the submarines would have to remain submerged most of the time, and their batteries would run down. Unfortunately, there are several million square miles of ocean to be cleared. Submarines sight enemy warships and aircraft as soon as they are sighted themselves, and submerge at once. Thus submarines are only slightly hampered by a sweeping operation.

In short, the only answer to the submarine menace, in the opinion of the best naval minds, is the presence of warcraft which can attack the submarines when they attack merchant ships. If the President will face the changes wrought by onrushing events and face the unwisdom of delaying action in hopes of a pretext for action, the ablest men in our Navy are convinced the Battle of the Atlantic can be won both quickly and gloriously. On the other hand, the men around the President who really know the war picture are equally strong in the belief that the war may be lost if action is much further delayed.

Sherwood Assails 'Short-Sightedness'

New York, June 8 (AP).—Accusing a "few short-sighted leaders of capital and labor" of "playing Hitler's game," Robert E. Sherwood declared in a radio address tonight that "the enemy is striking at our defense through our vital industry."

"All leaders of capital and labor alike who defy the authority of our Government, who defy the overwhelming will of the people, are actually Hitler's allies in this war," the playwright said in a talk over the Columbia Broadcasting System, under the auspices of the Joint Army and Navy Committee on Welfare and Recreation.

Nazis Reported In South Sea Isles

London (Monday), June 9 (INS).—German naval technicians and scientists, disguised as "archeologists," are in Japanese-mandated islands of the Pacific laying out U-boat bases and harbor defenses, the London Daily Sketch stated early today.

One group of these experts, touring the Marianne Islands, is headed by Dr. Carl Klever, noted harbor engineer, it was asserted. The Mariannes were described as an ideal U-boat base, dominating the sea route from the American Philippines to Japan. Klever's large party was reported to have recently completed a tour of the Ponape group.

The Once Over

By H. I. Phillips

Dear Ma: Never do I wish I was in some other branch of service like aviation or even ski units as I am right now on account of the infantry training is getting harder on the feet all the time. The first few months was all child's play compared to what we get now. The Army is one place where the more experience you get the more work you get and if anybody goes through a full year in it I gess he becomes a sooperman. I used to have a idea what I was doing each day here but I have lost all track of it now, espeshully since we start getting so much night manoovers.

I am used to living in a city with street lights on every block and so out here in the woods where even a match seems like a gas house fire I am lost most of the time witch I gess is true of the rest of my outfit.

I am allergical to the dark I guess. I never did like it much and out here where I am a total stranger it makes me awful nervous. The dark is okay for owls and bats but it is no place for human beings except maybe on a petting party and there is no necking in the woods we are in most of the time as you could not get an auto in them without taking it apart first.

These manoovers come on awful sudden. We may be sitting around getting about ten minutes rest when there is a alert. Now a alert means call to danger and when we get that we know anything can happen to us except rest and comfort. The rumors that follow a alert are worse than what happens. One man will say we are going to Martinique, another will say he got word from a uncle that there is a rush order from Greenland and another says it is to be just another war game of the century. A war game is a manoover on a big scale. It is used to find out if the officers get lost easy and how much hiking a private can take without falling down.

The other night we piled into trucks witch I always like to have happen because I will never have no objections to hitch-hiking in no war. But after we got away out in the country where electricity has not never been discovered we had to pile out, put on our 40 pounds of equipment witch always seems a hundred pounds to me and start hiking. All I can say is that if war comes I hope my end of it takes place in daylight. I am all bruised up from falling over stone walls and trying to walk right through trees like they had swinging doors on them. But the bruises I get walking aint no worser than the ones I get trying to sleep catch as catch can and any time I read any poetry about soft green earth from now on I will start hissing Longfellow and everbody like him.

A funny thing is that it always rains about the time a army decides to go to bed in a rocky ravine.

Well I do not want you to worry so I will not go into any more of this except to say that I never know how we come out in a war game. There is a lot of officers running around with flags. They are called umpires. But whenever one meets another they have a terrible argument, so I guess they are as much at sea as we are about who is ahead.

I will close now as the manoovers are to start all over again on account of the last ones didn't turn out according to the set of directions. Love, OSCAR.

Could Supply East With Oil, Railroads Say

Copyright by New York Times

If half the Gulf Coast oil tankers are transferred to ocean service, United States railroads, with the assistance of the remainder, could handle oil movement expeditiously enough to prevent a shortage, it was maintained in a statement issued yesterday by the Association of American Railroads.

If all American ships now passing through the Panama Canal were transferred to other services it would mean an increased demand for railway car space of only 2½ per cent. This the railroads could handle without trouble, it is contended.

Although American railroads have 625,000 fewer cars now than in 1918, a freight train for each hour on the road now performs twice as great a service as it did then, it was said. In the first three months of this year 101,368,000,000 tons of freight were moved a mile, as compared with 82,000,000,000 ton-miles in 1918.

Syrian Stakes

By Barnet Nover

The British Take The Initiative

THE BRITISH are taking great risks in Syria. That fact must not be minimized, even though there is occasion for real rejoicing in the circumstance that this time, at least, the initiative has been wrested from Hitler by his enemies. But the British would be taking very much greater risks by remaining on the defensive in the Middle East and allowing the Nazis to transform Syria and Lebanon into a base of operations against Iraq, Palestine and the Suez Canal.

NOVER

Already the entry of British and Free French forces into the mandated area has led to a state of open if undeclared war between Great Britain and her former ally, Marshal Petain has denounced the action of the British as a "profoundly unjust aggression." Gen. Henri Dentz, who commands the Vichy contingents in Syria and Lebanon, has been ordered to resist and apparently is doing so. Two nations that were comrades in arms only a year ago are now engaged in bloody conflict. It is a tragic development to say the least.

AS LONG as the fighting between the former allies is limited to Syria and Lebanon, the British can dismiss it as more unpleasant than dangerous. Gen. Dentz has not the equipment for a prolonged struggle and it is by no means certain that he will be able to depend on the loyalty of all his troops. During recent weeks various French units of the Army of the Levant have crossed the border into Palestine and joined the de Gaulle movement. Other Vichy troops may be reluctant to fight their fellow Frenchmen and the British for the purpose of making good Vichy's sell-out to Berlin. And there are obstacles in the way of any large-scale German and Italian troop and plane movements to Syria.

The danger is that the fighting between British and French may not be limited to Syria and Lebanon, but will spread to other parts of the Mediterranean. In particular, there is the danger that Admiral Darlan, whose readiness to do Hitler's bidding was made clear long ago, will attempt to throw the French fleet into the scales against the British. If that happens, Britain's difficulties in the Mediterranean and the Atlantic would very considerably be multiplied.

THERE IS the further danger for the British that by dividing their forces in the Middle East they will not have strength enough to hold their lines in Egypt. Obviously the losses to them would enormously outweigh the gains if because of the effort that may be needed to take Syria they lose Egypt. For if they lose Egypt they lose the Mediterranean.

The problem facing the British in Syria, therefore, is not only to take possession of that vital strategic area, but to do so quickly and at relatively little cost. Should the campaign in Syria drag out for any great length of time, involve the use of a large number of British and Free French troops and compel the diversion to the new theater of any sizable portion of Britain's Middle Eastern air force, Gen. Wavell may find it difficult to halt a possible drive toward Suez by steadily reinforced Axis columns now concentrated in Libya.

ALL THESE various considerations no doubt help explain why the British waited as long as they did before embarking on their Syrian venture. When they did move, it was only because they had no practical alternative. The steady infiltration into Syria and Lebanon of an uncounted number of German "tourists" and technicians recalled only too vividly what had happened in Bulgaria earlier this year and the evil consequences that had followed that development. The Bulgarian authorities, it will be recalled, had also denied, up to the time when concealment was no longer possible, that there were any German troops in that kingdom. The British cannot afford to take seriously Vichy's ardent disclaimers regarding the presence of German soldiers in Syria and Lebanon. It is obvious, however, that there are not as many German troops, planes and technicians in Syria today as there would have been later on if the British had been willing to pursue a wholly defensive course.

A GLANCE at the map shows how important it is to Great Britain to prevent the Nazis from establishing a foothold in Syria. Once there in any force, they would have Turkey in a vice, constitute a major threat to the oil fields of Iraq, be in a position to drive on Suez and the Persian Gulf, and increase the peril in which the British fleet already finds itself in the eastern Mediterranean as a consequence of the fall of Crete.

Should the British succeed in taking Syria without at the same time being driven back in Egypt, that success would considerably offset their failure in Crete. Flanking Turkey on the southeast and east they would enable that nation to resist German pressures designed to bring Ankara into the "new order." They would be undisputed masters of the land bridge to Suez from the north. And from Syrian bases British bombers could range more freely over the Italian-held Dodecanese Islands.

In every battle hitherto, Hitler had had the enormous advantage of having his air force based closer to the fighting zone than did the enemy. That was true in Norway. That was true in Greece. It was again true in Crete. This time the factor of distance is against the Luftwaffe, although it may be offset somewhat by the weight of numbers that Hitler can throw into the air.

Under the circumstances, it is absolutely certain that he will do everything possible to bring Vichy fully into the war and in that way offset the possible gains the British may make in Syria where, for the first time, he must operate under the handicap of not having got there in time.

McClures, Cunninghams, Marshalls Give Parties

Garden parties—always a favorite with Washingtonians—were in the majority yesterday. Hosts at one of the largest of the season were Mr. and Mrs. John E. McClure who asked well over 300 people to drop in between 5 and 7 o'clock, at their home in Kenwood.

Some took the road to Arlington, Va., where Mrs. Mary F. Cunningham and her son, Lieut. Jack Cunningham, were entertaining at an al fresco party at their Virginia home.

Also going Arlington way were the guests that the Chief of Staff and Mrs. George C. Marshall asked over for Sunday luncheon—a favorite form of entertainment with the Army's top-ranking officer and his gracious wife. Later in the afternoon Mrs. Marshall left for Williamsburg, Va.

Cars by the dozens streamed up the McClure driveway on Chamberlain Avenue between 5 and 7 o'clock. It was a representative crowd as guests were happily divided between residential, diplomatic and service sets.

Mrs. McClure received her guests wearing a smoke blue chiffon frock fashioned on Grecian lines. It trailed the lawn as she went from one group and then another. The gown was trimmed with silver beads and a cluster of orchids completed her ensemble. Receiving with Mrs. McClure was Mrs. George Horkan, who with Col. Horkan, had come down from Philadelphia and will be here for a few days.

Jacksons Arrive Early at McClures'

The Attorney General and Mrs. Robert Jackson were among the early arrivals. Stopping for a sip of punch on the terrace overlooking the lovely garden, now ablaom with rambler roses, were the Assistant Secretary of the Treasury and Mrs. Daniel Bell. Not far away was their pretty debutante daughter, Miss Kathleen Bell. Ambassador of Cuba and Mme. Concheso were among the invited guests as were Senator and Mrs. James Brynes, Senator Arthur Capper, the Ambassador of Ecuador and Senora de Alfaro, Mr. and Mrs. Joseph E. Davies and Maj. Gen. and Mrs. William D. Conner.

Along with the spicy punch, frapes and sandwiches were served. Tables were set up on the terrace and the screened-in porch. Here clusters of late spring flowers, in pastel shades, were used effectively. Many guests clustered around the tea table in the dining room. A low silver bowl, filled with flowers, was flanked by a tall silver vase holding snapdragons and stock. Among those asked to assist the hostess were Mrs. Robert Jackson, Senora de Pastoriza, Senora de Recinos, Mrs. David Blair, Mrs. Robert Miller, Mrs. Ricardo Alfaro, Mrs. Emory Adams, Mrs. Frederick Coleman, Mrs. Donald Richberg, Mrs. Walter Tuckerman, Mrs. Emil Hurja, Mrs. Parker West, Mrs. Clifford Carter, Mrs. William Thornwall Davis, Judge Anabelle Mathews, Mrs. Marshall Diggs, Mrs. Francis Hill, Mrs. Homer Hendricks, Mrs. Louis Montford, Mrs. Clifford Bangs and Mrs. Walter Distler.

Just to mention a few more attending the McClures' pleasant party were Mr. and Mrs. Lawrence V. Benet, Mrs. Frank Bohn, Mrs. William E. Borah, Senator Frederick Hale, Senator and Mrs. Scott Lucas, Admiral and Mrs. William McDougall, Rear Admiral and Mrs. Ross T. McIntyre, Maj. Gen. and Mrs. Guy V. Henry, Justice and Mrs. D. Lawrence Groner, Dr. and Mrs. Stanley Hornbeck, former Gov. and Mrs. O. Max Gardner and Homer S. Cummings.

Cordons Among Guests At Cunninghams'

Meanwhile, the Cunningham party was in full swing. Here, too, the rambler roses came in for a good deal of attention. Col. W. W. Gordon, commandant at Fort Myer, and Mrs. Gordon were among the guests. Lieut. Cunningham, who left his law practice to go into the Army, has just returned from maneuvers, and he asked a great many of his friends in the legal field to meet a few Army folk. His brother, Thomas Cunningham, was on hand to act as cohost.

Mrs. Cunningham had asked a group to assist her and they included Mrs. W. T. Hepburn, Miss Edith Hepburn, Mrs. Phillip Cunningham, Mrs. Agnes Fealey, Mrs. Richard Newman and Miss Madeline O'Leary.

Gen. Porter, Wife Receive At War College

Maj. Gen. William N. Porter, new Chief of Chemical Warfare Service, and Mrs. Porter were given a reception yesterday afternoon by the officers and ladies of the service. The party was held between 5 and 7 o'clock in the Officers Club of the Army War College.

The honor guests received just inside the ballroom which was massed with palms, peonies and stock. Mrs. Porter wore a black and white printed frock with a wide ruffle about the neckline and elbow length sleeves. Receiving with them were Col. and Mrs. Arthur M. Heritage. Mrs. Heritage wore a net frock made of layers of black and white tulle. Introducing the guests was Executive Officer, Col. Paul X. English.

Guests wandered about the spacious, green-walled room where three tables had been set up. One served as a bar where martinis and scotch and soda were dispensed. Another held canapes of all kinds as well as caviar in a boat of cream cheese. The largest table of all, however, was centered with an enormous bouquet of larkspur, peonies and snapdragons. An unusual feature was watermelon scooped into balls with toothpicks stuck through them.

Three former chiefs of the Chemical Warfare division, Maj. Gens. Amos Fries, Harry L. Gilchrist and Walter Baker, and their wives attended the party. Mrs. Fries wearing a smart black net ensemble with flowers appliqued on it and a wide brimmed black hat to complete the ensemble. Mrs. Gilchrist had on a flower printed frock in dusty rose. Mrs. Baker came in a black and printed frock with a wide, white hat.

Seen at the party were Brig. Gen. Henry Rutherford, Col. and Mrs. Geoffrey Marshall, who were in charge of arrangements for the party; Mrs. Paul X. English, in a stunning black outfit; Col. and Mrs. Hugh Roland, in a blue and white printed frock; Maj. and Mrs. Joseph Battley, Maj. and Mrs. Robert Tate, Mrs. Harry Lebpicher and many others.

The Right and Wrong Costumes for Job Hunting

The girl entering the business world should choose a neat outfit as at left—a black rayon shantung with chamois colored blouse and matching linen hat. Modeled by Jean Carter at a fashion show for students of the Strayer College of Secretarial Training

Wholesome Look Is Best Asset Of Girl Seeking Office Work

By Jane Driscoll
The Post Fashion Editor.

WHAT first impression should the young job seeker give to the man behind the desk? One of naturalness and wholesomeness, says Mrs. Hester Beall Provensen, assistant professor in the department of speech at the University of Maryland.

Mrs. Provensen spoke this week on the job seeker's appearance and personality before the girls of the Strayer College of Secretarial Training. Clothes furnished by a local store were modeled by girls of the college to illustrate Mrs. Provensen's talk.

Personality and charm were emphasized by the speaker as important both at the time of the interview and after the job has been landed. For a definiton of charm she quoted J. M. Barrie—"It's a sort of bloom on a woman. If she has it, she doesn't need anything else."

"Tuck Tail In"

Mrs. Provensen would include both clothes and posture under charm. In her advice on posture she quoted the late Flo Ziegfeld's instruction to his girls to "tuck the tail under" and Marjorie Williamson's statement, "No flower can have two stems."

As to the job interview she warned that the applicant should know definitely what type of response she wanted from life, what response from the interview and what response in five years time.

She firmly believes a girl should go after the type of job she is really interested in and not just take the first opportunity that comes along. "An employer is not concerned with whether or not you need a job," she said. "He is concerned about what you can do for the firm. If he thinks you have something to give, then he will engage you."

Simplicity Stressed

In dressing for the job, and the interview as well, simplicity of line was stressed. "Do without all the extra furbelows possible," said Mrs. Provensen. She quoted from an authority who said, "Perfection is achieved, not when there is nothing more to add, but when nothing more can be taken away."

Through presenting a series of models wearing the right and wrong type of dress, Mrs. Provensen stressed "dressing appropriately for the job" by the following points:

Dress for economy with "all occasion" outfits in mind.

Dark colors are preferred. They do not show soil and always look neat.

A touch of white is appealing.

Do not wear skirts too short. If the skirt is a circular one, it may be a trifle shorter as it covers the knees when one sits down.

To judge the length of skirts, stand in front of a mirror and sit in a chair.

Wear a dark slip under a dark sheer.

Beware of red accessories unless the rest of outfit is very plain.

Coconut straw hats are appropriate as they do not show soil.

Cotton seersucker, shirting materials and dark sheers were suggested as fresh looking.

Watch out for the feminine niceties about the person.

Sheer hosiery demands hairless legs.

Own a hairbrush and use it. Youthful styles in hairdress are short bobs or the hair worn high on the head.

What men employers frown upon are too much lipstick and vivid nailpolish.

Lastly quoting a New York magazine, she said, "Beauty is not a gift, but a matter of habit."

The Gentler Sex

Old Grad's Diary

MONDAY EVENING—Arrived this afternoon. Campus just the same. Also the dear old ivy covered buildings. Everything so quiet, serene, remote. What a blessed escape from this ugly world! No cries of newsboys, no big headlines. One place at last Hitler can be forgotten. Think I will stay over another week after Commencement just to enjoy this wonderful calm and peace. This is really the way everyone ought to live.

TUESDAY MORNING—Up early as didn't sleep so well last night. Not used to dormitory beds. My roommate is Ann Mosey—Jeepers now, from Detroit. She has changed a lot and is terribly slow about everything. She says I look just the same as I always did. Ate in dormitory last night and this morning. The food is all right but not very well prepared nor served. We go to a class luncheon this noon at a hotel (thank Heaven). Hope I can pick up a city newspaper downtown. Haven't the slightest idea what is going on in the world.

TUESDAY NIGHT—Will write a line while I am waiting for Ann to finish in the bathroom. Wonder what everybody at home is doing tonight—and if Viola cooked a good dinner. Would love one of her sweetbread croquettes! . . . Saw lots of the old girls at the luncheon. The only one who hasn't changed is Estelle Preen. She still looks about the same, but they all say she spends all her time working at it. . . . Molly Blink, who sat by me talked incessantly about her children. Grace Scallop was on the other side and told me the life history of every pupil in her math department. Food at the luncheon not very good, and tonight Ann and I hunted up a little tea house she had heard of. Food only fair. . . . Finally found a newspaper. Headlines very discouraging. Am greatly worried about Suez.

WEDNESDAY MORNING—Waiting my turn for the bathroom. Estelle moved in with us last night. They gave her a cot after she said she couldn't get a room at the hotel. If I had had any sense I would have made a hotel reservation six months ago. Bad enough for two persons to use one bathroom, let alone three. Ann takes an hour to wash her teeth and Estelle sits in front of the mirror forever and nobody can get near it. Have to do all my primping out of my compact. How I ever stood living four in a dormitory room that freshman year is more than I can understand.

WEDNESDAY NIGHT—Might as well write, as Estelle will keep the lights on all night getting ready for bed. It takes her two hours. Am simply a wreck. Class day exercises, a faculty luncheon, a pageant, a banquet and a reception. The seniors are so sweet—but so young. I was so much more grownup when I was their age. The teachers all look about the same—just someway a little more shadowy. What monotonous lives they lead—so far removed from reality! Bought all the papers I could find downtown. Am beginning to feel guilty here frittering away my time when such terrible things are happening in the world. Thankful it all will be over after the alumnae meeting Friday. Must inquire about trains in the morning.

THURSDAY NOON—Just a line while I am waiting for Ann to get out of the bathroom and Estelle away from the mirror. Both very set in their ways. Commencement exercises this morning were beautiful, but I was too tired to enjoy them. Haven't really slept for three nights. Slipped away when they began awarding the diplomas and went downtown to inquire about trains. Can get one out tomorrow morning or tomorrow night. Have half a notion to go in the morning. I can't help but feel a little uneasy about everyone at home—especially with things the way they are abroad.

THURSDAY EVENING—All packed and waiting for taxi. Decided to leave tonight. Can get good night's sleep on train and be home for breakfast. Feel I simply must get back to the family—and the war.

Proper Diet Makes Children, Grow Taller, Experiments Show

By Ida Jean Kain

"We want our son to grow taller than his father. What vitamins will help him to grow?" That is a typical question on the part of modern parents, and it is a sign of progress.

We used to be resigned to the restrictions imposed by heredity, but now we are optimistic about what can be accomplished through nutrition. It has been proved that an optimal diet enhances a child's chances of growth.

If you want your child to outstrip your generation, you will select the foods which give him a well-rounded, balanced diet and not place all the importance on one paritcular vitamin. All the food essentials must be supplied in adequate amounts.

Check the menus from every angle. We'll start with vitamin A, for it affects every part of the body—glands, bones, teeth, nerves and eyes, as well as growth. To assure sufficient A, the daily menu must include cod-liver or fish liver oil in addition to a quart of whole milk, butter, eggs, and green, leafy vegetables.

Some foods make a more valuable contribution to the diet than others. Milk heads this list. Without it the child cannot possibly get enough calcium. Every child should have daily at least three glasses of whole milk, plus the foods supplying vitamins A, C and D, which are necessary to the utilization of calcium. If you cannot stretch your budget to provide that amount of milk for every child, use undiluted evaporated milk or dry milk.

Citrus fruits are the richest source of vitamin C, but fresh fruits in season are very good sources. So are canned tomatoes and raw cabbage. To furnish adequate vitamin C, the daily menus should include orange or tomato juice once a day and some other fruit and vegetable, preferably baked.

Experiments have shown that children who receive sufficient iron have a higher rate of growth and a higher level of health than those on iron-poor diets. The daily diet should include an egg, whole grain cereals and bread, green vegetables, and meat suited to the age of the child. These foods give him his share of iron.

Essential to Growth

growth and appetite. The child who does not take enough interest in food should be given a whole wheat cereal into which wheat germ has been stirred while cooking. For more flavor and minerals raisins, dates, figs or prunes may be added. All the bread in the child's menu should be of the whole grain variety, or the newly enriched bread.

A bulletin entitled "Diets to Fit the Family Income" has been issued by the Bureau of Economics and free copies are available to those writing to the Department of Agriculture, Washington, D. C. The number of the bulletin is 1,757. Mention this number when you write.

Mary Haworth's Mail

Wed Almost a Year to Young Widower, Bride Finds Him Good and Kind in Every Way, But Unloverlike, Living in the Past; Should She Leave Him?

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: About a year ago I married a young widower with two children and although he is good and kind to me in every way, he seems to lack deep love and affection for me. Instead, hsi whole life and interest center upon his children and memories of the past with his first wife. When he was courting me, he seemed to look forward to a new life with me, but his attitude is gradually changing since we have been married, even though he says he loves me.

I have done everything possible to make our home bright and happy for him; to be a real pal, and to take an interest in the things he enjoys. But he doesn't seem to notice. I am afraid my health will soon be broken, for his indifference hurts me deeply. I loved him, but I am beginning to feel I have no place in his life,—which in turn is affecting my feeling for him. I feel he was unjust in marrying me.

Would you advise me to have a child? If we had a child, might his affection for me deepen? Or would you advise me to run away from it all and go back to my former life, trying to find happiness in my work? (I had a position with a business firm for three years before getting married, and I am sure I could soon find work again.) Do you think it is possible he might learn to love me in time? Or is it true that a man loves deeply only once?

He doesn't care for my friends or family at all. He associates almost entirely with his folks and (still worse) with his late wife's relatives. As a result of playing hostess to her people, I have had many slurs and slights visited upon me, which my husband doesn't seem to resent in the least. Is it his duty to continue a relationship with her family, endangering our happiness? Please advise me what stand to take, before it is too late. LONELY WIFE.

It Appears That Wife Is Failing Her Husband

DEAR L. W.: How can you be so childish and stupid as to place your husband on the defensive (even in your own mind), for lacking "deep love and affection" for you?—when he proves by the unfailing goodness and kindness of his attitude that he would gladly (if he could) care for you warmly and tenderly? If, while courting you, he seemed to look forward to a new life with you; but, since marriage, has gradually lost that forward-looking attitude, and now centers his whole interest in his children, and in memories of happiness he knew with his first wife—we must assume that you have unwittingly failed his expectations in many ways.

It may be that he married you because he fancied you resembled his wife; and then lived to learn, in daily intimacy, that you aren't in the least like her, fundamentally, even though the color of your eyes, the cast of your countenance, or other superficial characteristics of yours may be reminiscent of her. Or it could be that he married you because he hoped (or was given reason to think) you would make a good substitute mother for his children—and has lived to learn that you actually resent them, as reminders of their mother, and as rival claimants to his love and attention. Or he may have married you merely because you were available, sympathetic and seemingly a paragon of all the womanly virtues, whereas he was lonely, convinced he never would love wholeheartedly again, and deeply concerned about "keeping his home together" for the children's sake.

In any event, he took you on faith, with the expectation that you would prove to be a solacing companion to him and kindly stepmother to his children,—a kind of household ministering angel. And you took him on faith, with the expectation that he was going to love you with a first-time bridegroom's poetic ardor, just because he was your first-time bridegroom. Having got married at cross purposes, so to speak, you two have remained at cross purposes ever since,—and it is problematic whether you personally can rise above your disappointment sufficiently to take the relationship in hand and build, patiently but surely, toward a day when he will have grown completely and dependently in love with you, and will suddenly be made acquainted with the fact by some circumstance that arises to show him how dear you are to him; how indispensable to his comfort and serenity of spirit.

It appears that you married him mostly to be loved; rather than with joy at the prospect of being privileged to lavish love upon him and his children. You have sought to make the home bright and happy, to be "a real pal" to him, and to "take an interest in the things he enjoys," all for the purpose of focusing his attention upon you; rather than with the idea of completing his life, so that he may move quietly through his days with no sense of any lack.

In other words, your attitude toward marriage has been essentially self-serving in intent. Yet, if you could (as I once heard a woman say) "get yourself out of the way," in your mental approach to the situation, it is likely you could win through eventually to a quiet, deeply rooted companionship with your husband, which would flower naturally in reciprocal manifestations of heart-warming love.

Time can be your greatest ally in delivering your husband from his enslavement to memories of the past. Combine the element of time (say three, five or even ten years) with the serene enactment, on your part, of a steadfast purpose to comprehend and fulfill your husband's every expectation of you, and you cannot fail to be crowned queen of his heart. But this entails, as I have already said, "getting yourself out of the way;"—which means, of course, having done with fretful thoughts of what you wanted and expected of the marriage and haven't yet received. It means concentrating instead, on ways and means of enriching and constructively guiding the lives of these three persons with whom your lot has been cast.

As to whether to have a baby; whether paternity would bring you and your husband closer together,—that is a thought to discuss with him. Ordinarily, a child is a seal of reciprocal love in marriage, and a further irritant and source of dispute and estrangement where love does not exist. But in inviting discussion of the question, you would be making tactful opportunity for revealing to him the full extent of your worried unhappiness in the marriage, and for letting him know how intensely you desire to do everything in your power to become a truly beloved wife to him. Perhaps if he realized how desperately disturbed you are, he would begin to show a more awarely cooperative attitude than he has before.

I don't advise you "to run away from it all and go back to your former life." In so doing, you would be cheating yourself; exchanging your birthright of wifehood and motherhood for a mess of pottage indeed.

Be Charitable, Catholic U. Class Told

"The practice of charity is a personal obligation incumbent on each member of the church," the 750 graduating seniors of Catholic University were told yesterday by the Very Rev. Thomas E. Mitchell, S. T. D.

Speaking at the university's baccalaureate services, held at the Shrine of the Immaculate Conception, Father Mitchell, dean of the university's school of social work, told the seniors that "material success, position, knowledge, is worthless if you fail to love God and your fellowman, for His sake."

Class day exercises will be held at 4:45 p. m. tomorrow afternoon, with the Most Rev. Joseph M. Corrigan, titular Bishop of Bilta and rector of the university, presiding. Seniors will be addressed by Dr. Joseph P. Derby, of Springfield, Mass., class of 1915.

His excellency, the Most Rev. Amleto Giovannia Cicognani, apostolic delegate to the United States, will preside at commencement exercises on Wednesday when the graduates receive their diplomas. Adolf A. Berle, jr., assistant secretary of State, will deliver the main address.

While it is "the right of Government to relieve the material needs of its citizens," Father Mitchell told the seniors that "you have a supernatural and personal obligation to practice works of charity. Governmental help is neither a substitute for that personal obligation in its entirety nor a sufficient excuse for refusing to help one's fellow man whenever the opportunity is presented and one has the means to render such assistance."

The mass was preceded by a procession of the seniors and faculty members, dressed in cap and gown, from the university to the Shrine. Celebrant was Msgr. Patrick J. McCormick, vice rector of the university.

The valedictory address will be delivered at class day by Leo Brady, who has been awarded a fellowship in the graduate school of the university. The deans of the schools of the university will read the list of honors and Bernard J. O'Keefe will be awarded the Engineers Club plaque.

Bishop Corrigan will receive the graduates, their families and friends at the rector's reception immediately following the exercises.

33 Start Tests As Drivers For Red Cross

Thirty-three Washington women, aspirants for membership in the expanding District Red Cross Motor Corps, yesterday took a turn at driving to show what they could do.

Their instructors were driver-trainers from the American Automobile Association and the driving course was that developed by the AAA's National Safety and Traffic Engineering Department. Starting point of the drive was the American Red Cross headquarters and the route was in its general vicinity.

The aspirants for motor corps membership will receive "shop talks" in some of the city's garages and service stations on the operation, care and repair of automobiles; will take driver-reaction and vision tests, and will get talks on night driving and driving during blackouts.

On Friday, June 20, "finals" will be held, including a field day devoted to tests and demonstrations on a roped-off portion of Jefferson Drive between Sixth and Seventh Streets. The course will end on June 23 at the District Red Cross canteen room, where the women will be given written examinations. Those passing will get certificates.

Gen. Johnson on Pan For Expense Accounts

Uncle Sam, it seems, has gotten around to checking up on the travel vouchers, per diem, and other expenses paid employes and officials of the defunct NRA. The investigators, it's reported, have none other than Gen. Hugh S. Johnson, former NRA administrator and newspaper columnist, on the pan. It's said that "Old Ironpants" didn't conform to all the rules and regulations governing expense accounts when he was the NRA chief and now the Government has or will file a claim against him. The amount of the claim is understood to be between $2,000 and $2,500. General Accounting Office is reported to have made the inquiry of old NRA accounts and the claims have or will be turned over to the Justice Department for collection.

Uncle Sam has unlimited preserverance when it comes to collecting claims. He can sue for collection through the Justice Department or he will place it on the accounts due file at the GAO and the amount of the claim will be deducted if and when the Government gives a check to the person the claim is against.

A classic story is told about Gerald Lyons, former deputy governor of Farm Credit Administration, that Uncle Sam never forgets a debt. Lyons was battling in France in 1918 with the A. E. F. He was given two mules by an Army officer and ordered to do a job. In the midst of his assignment a German shell killed one of his mules. Lyons thought no more of it when he returned with one mule. Years later he accepted a job with FCA. His first check was some $40 short. A notation said "claim deducted." Lyons investigated and discovered that the GAO had made him pay for the mule the Germans shot.

Another story about Uncle Sam's elephantine memory concerns a Federal official from Ohio who was made to pay about $30 to the Government that his grandfather had stolen from a post office where he had been postmaster years ago. The grandfather had been dead for years and the official knew nothing whatsoever about his theft.

Edward Noble, the former Undersecretary of Commerce who resigned to support Willkie, is angling for a job on the proposed St. Lawrence commission. Tommy Corcoran is reported to be promoting Noble. . . . N. L. R. B. Member Edwin Smith, whose term expires soon, won't be reappointed. A successor is being hunted. . . . Edwin McElwain, law clerk to Chief Justice Hughes, has been offered several jobs. He'll probably take a position with Dean Acheson, Assistant Secretary of State.

Incidentally, Acheson has powerful influence behind him for administrator of the proposed new agency of economic warfare. So has Herbert Gaston, Assistant Secretary of the Treasury, and Will Clayton, deputy Federal Loan Administrator. Acheson also is a possibility for solicitor general if Francis Biddle is moved up to Attorney General and Robert Jackson goes to the Supreme Court. Charles Fahy, assistant Solicitor General, should be a cinch for promotion. Tommy Corcoran and Ben Cohen also have been mentioned for solicitor general but Cohen is expected to become SEC chairman.

Supreme Court Justice Frank Murphy is reported to be restless with court life. He has had several conferences with President Roosevelt recently and it's said to be a distinct possibility that Murphy will resign to accept appointment as either commissioner of the Phillipines, a post he once held, or as an ambassador to Mexico.

Bituminous Coal has had more than 250 employes resign to accept better jobs in the last eight months, about a 30 per cent turnover. The Senate increased its appropriation over the amount approved by the House by $221,000. This would be sufficient to hire 140 new employes. . . . Donn Acher, War Department employe, has a Federal employe program over WWDC that can be heard tonight at 9. He needs talent for his show. . . . Postoffice Recreation Association members will perform at the Federal Playhouse Thursday night in Agriculture Auditorium.

Religion Seen as Major Need Of Education by School Leader

Georgetown University seniors attending the baccalaureate mass yesterday morning in Dahlgren Chapel were told by the Rev. Thomas L. O'Neill, C. S. P. of New York, that the modern system of separating classical and religious wisdom from education, if allowed to continue, would eventually destroy Western civilization.

The 509 seniors who are to get their degrees at the commencement program this afternoon were urged by the Paulist preacher to join in the movement "to put back classical and traditional learning into its rightful place."

Father O'Neill, a Georgetown alumnus of 1899 and associated with the Church of St. Paul the Apostle in New York, took as the text for his sermon, "For God created man incorruptible and to the image of His own likeness He made him."

Civilization in Peril

Deploring the fact that modern trends in education fail to distinguish between right and wrong, truth and falsehood, Father O'Neill said that one of the keenest observers in public life today has declared that this system is in fact destroying Western civilization.

This "disorganized system of education," he warned, has made "a fertile field for one to plant the misleading thought that knowledge is relative; that truth and falsehood are interchangeable; that the real test of truth is whether it succeeds or not.

The baccalaureate mass was attended by the Most Rev. Thomas A. Emmet, S. J., vicar apostolic of Jamaica, the Very Rev. Arthur A. O'Leary, S. J., president of the university, and members of the faculty.

The celebrant of the mass was the Rev. Charles J. Foley, S. J. and the other officers were Jesuit scholastics, Charles L. Coolahan, deacon; Edward H. Dineen, sub-deacon, and Brian A. McGrath, master of ceremonies. Al Philip Kane was chief marshal of the academic procession that preceded the mass.

Medals Awarded

The university celebrated the eve of its 142d annual commencement last night with a colorful outdoor program in the college quadrangle featuring the traditional Cohonguroton oration and the awarding of coveted prizes and medals to honor graduates in all departments.

Thomas F. Mullahey, jr., of Shanghai, China, who won two of the college prizes, delivered the Cohonguroton as president of the Students' Council. Costumed as an Indian chief and standing outside a canvas tepee, he followed Georgetown tradition by giving the seniors' farewell to the Potomac River. The oration derives its origin from the name given by the Indians to the Potomac, the "River of Swans."

Edward J. Snyder, president of the senor class, presided at the collegians' exercises and hundreds of alumni and proud parents crowded the historic quadrangle.

Capital News In Brief

Runaway Boy Faints, Is Revived With Meal

Fifteen-year-old George Nelson is probably a much wiser boy this morning. George ran away from his home in Worcester, Mass., several days ago to see the sights of Washington. But it probably didn't occur to him at the time that one has to eat.

Last night police received a call from Seventh Street and Massachusetts Avenue Northwest, that a boy had collapsed. They found George and took him to Emergency Hospital where he was given first aid and a big meal.

Man, 66, Is Slugged And Robbed in Hotel

Alonzo E. Bunch, 66, 1339 Fourteenth Street Northwest, was slugged on the head by two men in a downtown hotel's washroom last night and robbed of $180. He was treated at Emergency Hospital for cuts.

Bunch told police he had made a purchase at a nearby drug store a few minutes earlier and was apparently followed to the hotel by his assailants.

Dive in Shallow Water Badly Hurts Boy, 15

A 15-year-old boy is in a serious condition at Casualty Hospital suffering from head and back injuries received when he dived in shallow water in the Northwest Branch of the Anacostia River late yesterday.

The boy, John Cooper, 619 Eleventh Street Northeast, was seen lying in the water by an unidentified man, who called Bladensburg police. Members of the Rescue Squad worked over the boy for a half hour and finally revived him.

Murder in the Spring

3 Slayings in 3 Months Baffle D. C. Police

By John Fingerhoff
Post Staff Writer

On March 3, a young husband walked into his small apartment at 1901 Sixteenth Street Northwest, to find his bride of less than 30 days, Rose Abramowitz, ravished and strangled.

Two months later, on May 6, Dr. Heinrich S. Simon, 61-year-old German refugee and music authority, returned to his home at 1816 New Hampshire Avenue Northwest, at 3 a. m. to die three hours later of a broken skull, a victim of a vicious street assault.

Eighteen days after this, in a shabby rooming house at 1527 Columbia Street Northwest, Lewis T. Karn, 29, of 1205 Gallatin Street Northwest, was shot to death and left sprawled in a second-floor hallway.

These three murders in as many months add to an already long list of unsolved slayings in the Nation's Capital and boost to 9 the total of mystery killings in Washington in the past 20 months.

"We're doing all we can. What more can we do?" declares Lieut. George Darnall, chief of the homicide squad, admitting at the same time that his squad of six men has uncovered not a single scrap of information to lead to a solution of any of these crimes.

Mrs. Abramowitz, 32, a newcomer to Washington, was not likely to have admitted a stranger to the two-room honeymoon apartment, her husband said.

Was the intruder a friend, or was he a person who won the confidence of the auburn-haired bride to a point that she loosed a night chain on the apartment door to allow admittance?

Her husband, Barney N. Abramowitz, a Social Security Board attorney, told police his wife had only a few friends in the city and that she never removed the chain from the door while she was home alone.

Every night when he returned from his office, he said, she would open the door only the length of the chain and make sure it was he before releasing the lock.

Yet the chain on the door was not broken when the body was found. The door was locked with a snap lock but the chain was not engaged. No marks were visible to prove that the door might have been forced.

Bridegroom's Return

It was a cold and snowy Saturday morning that Barney Abramowitz kissed his wife goodby before he left for work. On his way through the lobby he noticed that the mail man had left several letters.

He left them there; reported to his office, worked half a day and came home, to find the apartment looked. He had no key and his knocking brought no response.

With the aid of the janitor he entered and found his wife, lying unconscious on a day bed. She had been strangled.

Dark bruises showed on her throat, and her body under her clothing was smeared with blood. Yet there was not a trace of disorder in the apartment.

The flowered cotton housecoat she wore was not torn and she was lying peaceably, her clothing in order.

The letters which her husband had seen in the mail box and left there were in the apartment on an end table. They had been opened with a letter knife in just the fashion she always opened mail.

Detectives, thinking of the opened letters, at first believed the woman was followed to her apartment from the lobby mail box by her assailant who forced his way inside before she was able to close the door.

But, they agreed, had this occured, she would not have opened the letters in the apparently leisurely fashion and laid them on the table in the order in which they were found.

Residents of the building heard screams "and thumpings" shortly after 10 a. m. and their reports coincide with the approximate time of death established by the coroner.

None of the residents saw any suspicious persons about the building, they said, nor did they think to call the police or investigate the screams.

Investigators Stumped

This and the fact that despite the snow on the streets outside, there was not a single wet or muddy footprint discernible on the floor of the apartment, stumped the investigators.

Could her attacker live in the building? Each resident was a suspect until his or her whereabouts that morning had been ascertained. Each, however, established airtight alibis—facts which stood up under exhaustive inquiry.

Only the couple's fingerprints were found in the apartment. Scrapings from the woman's fingernails were unenlightening. Not a fragment of garment, not even a foreign piece of thread, was found.

All this lack of evidence points toward a cunning criminal brain—one which anticipated every police move and one which apparently planned and executed a perfect crime. At this writing the slayer of Mrs. Abramowitz remains beyond police perception.

Dr. Simon, an immigrant who sought the peace and quiet of America to escape the turmoil and bloodshed of his native Germany, was clubbed to death either during the night of May 5 or early in the morning the next day.

Detectives turned first to the dead doctor's wife for information concerning his whereabouts the night before.

She knew only that he had left for a walk about 9:30 p. m., as was his custom. He returned home about 3 a. m. without a key and was admitted by Mrs. Simon.

She did not notice that his hat was missing; that his clothes were grease-stained and disheveled because, she told investigators, she had arisen from bed at her husband's knock, and upon seeing it was he at the door, returned to her room without addressing or scrutinizing him.

Cab Driver Tells Story

About 6 a. m. she was aroused again, this time by the groans of her husband who slept in an adjoining room. She found him mortally hurt.

A taxicab driver, reading of the tragedy in the papers, came forward and told police he had picked up Dr. Simon about 2:30 a. m. at Eighteenth and Church Street Northwest. Dr. Simon was leaning against a tree in a dazed condition, the driver stated, and he drove him home. He could cast no further light on the case.

A post mortem examination disclosed Dr. Simon had been bludgeoned with a blunt instrument. Search of his clothing revealed he had been robbed of a billfold. His hat was gone.

Rumors of political intrigue and the possibility that Dr. Simon, former publisher of the Frankfurter Zeitung, anti-Hitler newspaper, was assassinated by Nazi agents was discounted. Assassins would not have robbed nor would they have attacked and fled without making certain their victim had been dispatched, police felt.

Wallet, Hat Still Missing

Police scoured the section where the doctor was found against the tree; they questioned every resident. None could give any worthwhile information and today, nothing more is known of Dr. Simon's attacker than was known the first day of the investigation.

Dr. Simon's wallet and hat have never been located. His whereabouts from 9 p. m. to 2:30 a. m. have not been determined.

He was shot through the heart by a .45 caliber bullet which passed through his body and into a wall. His body was discovered on the second floor corridor of a rooming house for colored people.

None of the residents or neighbors, as far as police have been able to determine, saw the man enter the house. Only one heard a shot, but he, according to police, denied seeing the gunman in the dimly-lit hallway.

Car Parked In Haste

At 1 a. m., May 24, Karns was at Fourth Street and Rhode Island Avenue Northeast, with friends. He left, telling them he was going home. An hour later he was dead.

Police found his automobile in front of the rooming house. It apparently had been parked in haste, for the rear wheels were away from the curb.

Karn had not been robbed. A quantity of money and his watch were in his pockets.

Was he a victim of traffic light bandits who jumped into his car, forced him to drive to the house and shot him when he resisted them? Or is there another reason?

The investigators don't know. They haven't found the murder gun nor have they found a single person who saw the victim at any time after he left the Northeast intersection until he entered the house.

Hearing Today for Bus Driver Involved in Crash Killing 2

Preliminary hearing on a technical charge of manslaughter will be held today in Hyattsville Police Court for Harry L. Miller, of Silver Spring, Md. Miller was operator of a Greyhound bus which figured in a crash near Muirkirk, Md., Saturday night, in which two persons were killed and at least four persons were injured.

Testimony of witnesses gathered by the police indicated that the automobile made a left turn into the path of the bus and both car and bus turned over after knocking down a pole bearing high tension wires. The wires set fire to both the bus and the car.

Occupants of the automobile, Miss Inez Monnett, 26, 1364 F Street Northeast, and Carl L. Owens, 25, 1360 F Street Northeast, who planned to marry next month, were killed.

The body of Miss Monnett was shipped last night to Sioux City, Iowa, where she is survived by her father, Samuel Monnett. Owens remained at Gasch's Funeral Home in Hyattsville, Md., pending funeral arrangements. He is survived by a mother, Mrs. E. L. Owens, who is in Louisiana. Owens was discharged from the Marine Corps a month ago.

Hospital attendants last night said the condition of Private Barcia, 191st Tank Battalion, in training at Fort Meade, was fair. Barcia, a passenger on the bus, suffered a possible spinal fracture and other injuries and was taken to a Baltimore hospital.

Sergt. Herbert Brimer, Private Frank Lazlo and Private Robert Laro, all of the 191st Tank Battalion and passengers on the bus, were treated at Fort Meade Hospital for second degree burns. Approximately 25 passengers on the bus, mostly Fort Meade soldiers, escaped by breaking windows and a back door of the overturned bus.

Cows Will Be Homeless In One More Short Week

Barn Theaters to Open Seasons June 16-17; 'That Hamilton Woman' Wins Coveted Award; This, That and the Other About the Theater

WEATHER OR NOT, the "straw hat" season will engulf the local haymows in exactly one week. . . . Next Monday, June 16, the Roadside Theater will open its season of six plays, to run two weeks each, with "The Mountain Limited," one of its typical, exhumed melodramas, starring one of its famous beaverboard trains. . . . A week from tomorrow night the Cross Roads, over at Bailey's Cross Roads, in Virginia, will inaugurate a season of ten weekly productions with Catharine Ryan in "George Washington Slept Here," the George S. Kaufman-Moss Hart comedy never before seen in Washington. . . . For a time it looked as if the Roadsiders would have to get along without Dorothy Croissant's costume-designing for the first time since the first "Murder in the Red Barn," back in 1934, but with the spirit of a valiant trouper she solved their problem by cutting a projected summer-long vacation at least in two. . . . And the Cross Roads wishes it known that despite the change in policy to weekly productions, subscription tickets still can be bought at the rate of six plays for the price of five. . . . Write to the theater or call CH-3241, which is by way of being the box-office.

BELL

If you happen to bump into an inflated chest rounding a corner half a block or so in advance of its owner, it will be the pouter-pigeon facade of Hardie Meakin, manager of RKO-Keith's. His elder son, Leonard, graduated from the University of Maryland last weekend, received his R. O. T. C. commission as second lieutenant and may be shavetailing it in camp any day now. In the case of the younger son, the prideful chest pulls in a little. An antic playground pal recently beaned Hardie, jr., aged 13, with a first-base bag, dislocating a vertebra and causing an unfortunate nerve condition in one arm—all in a spirit of good, clean fun, but it turned out to be a hospital case and the end is not yet.

Korda Romance Wins a Ribbon

Alexander Korda's production of "That Hamilton Woman," recently on the Palace screen with Vivien Leigh and Laurence Olivier costarred, won the Boxoffice Blue Ribbon Award for the month of May. . . . Boxoffice Magazine makes its monthly award on majority vote of the National Screen Council, including 225 motion picture editors, reviewing committee of the International Federation of Catholic Alumnae and State chairmen of the General Federation of Women's Clubs. . . . Leon Askin, director of the Washington Civic Theater, has taken up his new duties as Poo-Bah of the summer theater at Greenport, Long Island with a last word of high promises for next season's Civic enterprises. . . . In the meantime the Civic group will present a series of 13 weekly radio plays over Station WWDC, the first of which went on the air last week. . . . It has reached the point now where, if anyone asks Gary Cooper who that is following him around on the screen, he answers "Walter Brennan," without looking. . . . "Coop" and Walter broke into the films together as extras in the same picture back in 1925. . . . Recently they have been in three high-budget productions together—"The Westerner," "Meet John Doe" and the Warners' "Sergeant York" coming up. . . . Cooper took to the movie lots to augment his income as a cartoonist; Brennan, fresh out of the First World War, to overcome the deflation of a collapsed real estate boom. . . . And now look at them!

It is axiomatic that the show can't go on if the players can't, but there is a skillful practitioner in town who sees to it that they always can and do. Now that the season is over, there seems to be no harm in disclosing that save for the first-aid ministrations of Dr. Frank T. Skyne to Albert Hackett, Peggy Conklin, Mary Brian, Hugh O'Connell, Betty Field, about half of the principals of Fortune Gallo's San Carlo Grand Opera Co., and numerous others, Capital theatergoers would have seen pretty wobbly first performances of "Mr. and Mrs. North," "Off the Record," "Flight to the West," the San Carlo repertoire and many other touring attractions. He also relieves the stresses and strains to which the theater executives and drama desks are heir during the season. He has nailed this one together more than once when it seemed to be falling apart. Rudy Vallee once summed it up when he said, "There is magic in those hands." Walter Hampden, Jack Benny, Eddie Lowe, Bea Saxon, Buddy Rogers and scores more feel the same way about it. All of which probably stems from the fact that in an earlier incarnation this "saviour of the theater" used to be a showman himself. Anyhow, the theater and the public owe him a debt.

Shaw Continues to Be Shaw

The film version of George Bernard Shaw's "Major Barbara," also produced and directed by Gabriel Pascal, is now in its fourth week at the Astor Theater, New York, and bids fair to equal the record run of "Pygmalion". . . . Third week's receipts exceeded the second's by $1,000. . . . Wendy Hiller, Rex Harrison, Robert Morley and Robert Newton have the top spots. . . . Having celebrated the completion of two years at the Capitol with a Saturday night party in the Cosmos Room at the Carlton, the Rhythm Rockets depart in various directions for a two-weeks vacation at the end of this week. . . . Most of them hail from New York or New Jersey, but Dotty Sherman, Edith Lamb and Jane Zernia are Washingtonians and don't have to buy any tickets or waggle their thumbs.

second and fourth from left, interrupt one of their dizzy dances to indulge in a bit of characteristically gobbish romance. This would be in RKO-Radio's picturization of "Sunny," which will be coming along to a local screen in due course. Miss Neagle, in this one, gives further proof of her versatility by matching Mr. Bolger's comic hoofing

War Scenes Top New Bill At Trans-Lux

War pictures again illumine the new program at the Trans-Lux. First and outstanding this week in the informing newsreels are amazing flashes of the capture, by the British, of Asmara and the Port of Massawa, last strongholds of the Italians in East Africa, and the even more spectacular shots of the British retreat from Greece, under the protection of fleet antiaircraft.

Other war news subjects include a first glimpse of the army's new super, 82-ton, giant bomber, views of French school children in an affecting demonstration of love and friendliness toward the United States, and exhausted British and Anzac troops landing in Egypt.

Famous Figures Pass On

Newsreel coverage of the death of the former Kaiser of Germany is effectively presented, while the passing of popular Lou Gehrig provides a deeply felt note of sadness. The Dionne quintuplets present an ambulance to the Red Cross, and New Jersey's $25,000,000 fire is pictured. And, in the sports, college girls show their prowess at rowing, on Massachusetts' Charles River, and bathing girls on the highest water toboggan in the United States, at Bridgeton, Maine, furnish thrills for man and woman.

"Information Please" with Author Louis Bromfield as guest expert is extra good this issue. "Beautiful Ontario" a travelogue, and "Diving Thrills," a sport short, are equally good. The cartoon is "Popeye Meets Rip Van Winkle."

Joan Crawford Helps Win Prize

After reading an item in the paper that Joan Crawford was remodeling her garden a youngster who goes to a Los Angeles girl's school wrote a note to the star telling her the school was going to have a flower show and asking her to pass on any bulbs she no longer needed.

Joan sent the girl several cuttings and forgot about it. The youngster called the M-G-M Studios to ask for Joan's New York address. (Miss Crawford was on vacation due her after the completion of "A Woman's Face").

The visitor won first prize at the flower show and wanted to express her appreciation.

Won Contest

Robert Taylor won a ten-day trip to Detroit as the prize for his cello playing in a music contest during his early school days.

Leonard Lyons:

New York, June 8.

SCHOOL DEPT.: Prof. Edmund Burke, chairman of the Classical Languages Department of C. C. N. Y., retired last week after having taught there for 50 years. . . . While rummaging through a closet, before leaving, Prof. Burke unearthed a large ledger, which had been used, generations ago, as the students' "Late-Book". . . . Among the students of those days—when Prof. Burke was the "Lateness Tutor" before whom the tardy ones had to sign their names—were undergraduates whose signatures are clear and evident. The names are Felix Frankfurter, Upton Sinclair, Montague Glass, Robert F. Wagner. . . . On the very first page of that Late-Book is the signature of Edmund Burke, who came late to school quite frequently, because he missed the horse-drawn street car from lower New York to the college.

LEONARD LYONS

IN THE 50 YEARS of his teaching, Prof. Burke was absent only five days. The first absence occurred in 1894 when because of his father's death he was out for four days. The second absence was in 1903, when an ulcerated tooth puffed up one jaw. "I'd have come if both jaws had swelled," Prof. Burke stated, "because then they would have looked symmetrical."

SOCIAL NOTES: Sir Cedric Hardwicke recently entertained at his home, in honor of Somerset Maugham. Hardwicke wanted to take no risks about getting the proper services—especially since Ronald Colman and other distinguished British subjects also had been invited. And so he told his servants to take the night off, and arranged for Dave Chasen, the restaurateur, to do the catering . . . The proceeding came off satisfactorily until, just before the entree was to be served, the uniformed chef wearing an apron on which was emblazoned, in large letters, the revealing words, "Dave Chasen's," burst into the dining room and inquired: "Did you want that steak rare or medium?"

LOCAL NEWS: Miami detectives are in New York, to solve the killing of Pete Clifford, the night-club m. c. . . . Dorothy Parker has joined the Fight for Freedom Committee. And Upton Sinclair has wired the President, asking that the United States Navy be used, at once, to help Britain. . . . George Grosz, the artist, will contribute more than 100 illustrations for Ben Hecht's new book—without fee—in appreciation for Hecht's having helped his escape from Germany and bringing him to this country. . . . A. R. Glancy, OPM's ordnance chief, has booked Clipper passage. He'll assist W. Averell Harriman, in London. . . . The Stork Club will start presenting all the morning papers to each customer upon leaving. . . . The "I Am an American Day" committee is making a 20 per cent refund to all the contributors. Even though the event was so successful, not all the funds had to be used.

RADIO DEPT.: The Mutual Broadcasting System—which controls Station WOR—recently published a White Paper, about the radio battle now being waged among the chains. . . . A copy of the White Paper was sent to Maj. George Fielding Eliot, in care of themselves—WOR. . . . The mail-boy at WOR readdressed it, and forwarded it to the correct place—the rival station WABC.

Louella O. Parsons'

Close-Ups and Long-Shots Of the Motion Picture Scene

Hollywood, June 8 (INS).—Will Hays, czar of motion pictures, is a very sick man in St. Luke's Hospital, Chicago. He has been there since April 17, under the care of Dr. Joseph A. Capps, well known Chicago physician. Last week he was operated on by Dr. W. S. McCarthy. Hays has had a complete nervous breakdown and it is rumored that he may retire from the strenuous job of heading the Motion Picture Producers Association. His physician, when contacted, said that Hays was not entirely well from pneumonia when he returned to his job but that in another ten days he should have improved greatly.

Joe Pasternak, famous producer and the man who took Universal out of the red with Deanna Durbin's successes, is leaving that studio. There have been many rumors that Joe had asked to be released from his contract, but that was hard to believe, since he has been at Universal for 16 years and started there at $35 a week. But today he confirmed the report and told this writer just as we were going to press that as soon as he finishes "Almost an Angel," with Deanna Durbin, Charles Laughton and Robert Cummings, he would leave on a long vacation.

What elation on the Paramount lot when Bob Hope put his coveted signature on a new contract. He could have gone with any company in Hollywood, but Bob appreciates that Para was the first studio to give him his movie opportunity and he's not the type to forget old friends.

ϕ+ϕ

Betty Davis made her first appearance on the Warner lot since her illness laden with a megaphone of flowers for John Huston, Walter's son, who makes his debut as a director in "The Maltese Falcon." But shooting really doesn't start on this movie until Monday so the flowers were put on ice and will be handed John when the picture really gets going.

Snapshots of Hollywood collected at random: Bette Davis was the first in Hollywood to hear the good news that Jane Bryan welcomed an 8-pound baby boy, Justin Dart, Jane's husband, telephoned when the young man was only a few minutes old; William Holden has made out his draft questionnaire and is now waiting for Uncle Sam's call; Marie Wilson is still seeing Nick Grinde, although she has been spending time with a young actor, Allen Nixon.

Barbara Bennett dining at the Brown Derby before she and Addison Randall set off for Mexico to be married, Randall still on crutches; Barbara Pepper has bought her father a sedan for Father's Day; Robert Montgomery leaves July 1 for his farm in the East and is turning down all jobs until the fall; Mary Astor has bought seven acres for a ranch near Indio and Palm Springs.

That's all today. See you tomorrow!

Makes Career Playing Doorman

Who says that it doesn't pay to be "typed" in Hollywood? Richard Allen, who specializes in playing imposing footmen and doormen, is wearing the same braided uniform for the fiftieth time at Paramount, to appear as a hotel doorman in "West Point Widow," with Anne Shirley and Richard Carlson.

In Hollywood

Hollywood, June 8.

It's getting so most of our pictures employ the "flash-back" technique in telling their stories. "The Great McGinty," "Kitty Foyle," "Citizen Kane," "Cheers for Miss Bishop," "That Hamilton Woman," and now "Illusions"—all are presented as memories.

HOPPER

I asked Merle Oberon, who's starring in "Illusions," her explanation for it. She said, "Because there's nothing that so touches the human soul as the passing of time." And in these days, when pictures must go back to the past for beauty and sentiment, the flashback technique is more pertinent than ever, because more than anything, they make us realize the briefness of life, and the folly of using it in bickering and fighting. A picture like "Our Town," in which the finality of death and the glory of even an everyday life is driven home to us, does more to remove bitterness from the earth than a dozen "preaching" or propaganda films.

With the motion-picture theater owners gathering here for their annual convention, and the consent decree looming on the horizon, you're going to see a whopping change of attitude among our top stars. Some years ago, when a major studio held its sales convention here, they couldn't get one of their high-salaried stars to attend the big dinner given for the salesmen who had to sell their pictures. So they dressed up the secretaries, who went and were very charming.

Now I maintain that pictures, as well as beans, are put up in cans, and the men who have to sell those pictures should know what's inside that can. An actor's or actress' job isn't finished when a picture's finished. In these hard times, it's one for all and for one, if we're going to maintain the spot we've made for ourselves in an industrial world. I don't believe our stars will have to be asked more than once before seeing the light.

Poor Georgie Raft is so sensitive, nothing burns him up worse than to be typed as a "tough guy." The other day he was reading a newspaper blurb in which the word "menace" was used.

"Just look at that!" yelled George, furiously . . . "Who says I'm a menace? I'll break the back of the next guy who calls me that. Why, I've never been a menace in my life!" Whoa, there, George—it was "men-ace"—a compliment!

On March 11, this column printed the following statement attributed to Secretary of Labor Perkins: "The right of the C. I. O. to strike is paramount to the right of this country to have a national defense program, and prior to the safety and welfare of this Nation."

Our source was an address made by a Representative of Congress and printed in the Congressional Record. We are now advised by the Secretary that she did not make such a statement. We are glad to make this correction in justice to Secretary Perkins.

Bill Cunningham's Column: . . . . Traveler Finds No One Who Wants War

By Bill Cunningham

Fort Worth, Tex.—It's a long, hot road, brothers and sisters, and if you ever plan to drive it, pick your weather.

A standard affliction in this country is "driver's arm." You get it by rolling up your sleeve and resting your elbow atop the rolled-down window on the driver's side. The sun does the rest, and it's plenty, the Florida sun being a sissy compared with the Western variety.

Never look immediately around you and make the mistake of thinking "This is America." There's an awful lot more to it than you can see or even sense from one spot. You don't get it from train windows, or by looking down from planes. The best way really to meet it is to roll it by car. The experience is educational and inspirational. Canton, Ohio, for instance, isn't just the sport page place where they used to have the Canton Bulldogs with Old Jim Thorpe playing halfback. You should see that truly beautiful and powerfully industrial town.

It does something to the United States in you to drive in over the rolling hills and suddenly come upon the like of Youngstown, Ohio, at 2 o'clock in the morning, with those great steel mills lighting the black canopy for miles, the bells ringing, the locomotives whistling and chugging, the taverns open all night and broad-shouldered life moving. That's a tough town to spend the night in, if you chance to be a light sleeper. But, boy, it is in there punching.

The Midwest looks prosperous. The little towns look fresh and newly painted. The great farms are well kept up. The corn is young and green. Great elms throw their welcome shade across even the arterial highways, and the fact that war, or some great excitement, is moving off stage seems to be evident in the great fleets of trucks that roll almost in parade and the endless string of freight trains that thunder past in the night.

No One Wants War

Nowhere on this long road have I yet found anybody who unqualifiedly says he'd like to see us in the war—in any war. Many of the magazines and press services are canvassing these little "typical American towns" and presuming to come up with the verdict they're looking for. If there's any unanimity of opinion in the Midwest, it's that they just don't know.

From personal contact and observation of the past three months, I'd say the Southeast is pro-interventionist, the real East is uncertain, the Midwest is isolationist pending further developments. Lindbergh is pretty much of a hero through the country north of St. Louis.

There isn't much romance in these later times to tugboat and paddle wheel life on the mighty and muddy Mississippi. In common with a lot of other picturesque things, modern efficiency and streamlining have taken all the old-time color out of river life, but that doesn't mean there isn't plenty of business. A mass of freight moves down the river from St. Louis to New Orleans and the new general speedup promises to bring a large increase of this slow but less expensive mode of shipping.

I had an amazing experience with a cloudburst the other day. It drowned me first in Indianapolis. Between there and St. Louis, I drove out from under it six times, but on all six it cut cross-country to head me off like a fleet of Stukas, and let me have it again. Six separate times, I had to drive through water hub deep in some drowned village, to pull out on the high road and whizz for probably 50 dry miles before it caught me again. Then the same thing would happen.

It got to be a very personal cloudburst after the first hour and after five or six hours I was even shaking my fist at it. I tried to fox it once by pulling in under a tree and waiting for it to go on about its business. I almost fooled it, too, for it went on for probably 50 miles before it discovered that its bird had set, then derned if it didn't turn right around and come back after me.

Pavement and Plumbing

The first concrete pavement in the United States—I'm very concrete pavement conscious at the moment—was laid 50 years ago come June 13, back up the road a piece in Bellefontaine, Ohio. They're going to hold a great golden jubilee celebration in honor of the date. The feature will be the unveiling of a marker which reads "This is the first Portland cement street built in the United States. Here started the Better Roads movement which has given our citizens from coast-to-coast swift and sure transportation."

Well, here's my salute, although I guess they haven't heard about it yet up in Southern Missouri and Arkansas. It's still mostly gravel up there.

My supreme nomination for the all time Nobel prize has always been the gentleman who first figured out plumbing. But, the discoverer of air conditioning rates a companionate niche. You don't really appreciate him until you start getting south in hot weather. I'll bet a cookie he grew up in Texas.

Nats Reverse Form and Defeat Tigers, 9 to 3

This Morning

With Shirley Povich

Detroit, June 8.—The Detroit Tigers are providing the best commentary on the state of affairs in the American League. A Detroit team that was supposed to be wrecked by the loss of Hank Greenberg and is operating also without any assistance from Buck Newsom, its No. 1 pitcher of last season, is only 5½ games out of the league lead. What do you make of it?

POVICH

The evidence is that the pennant would be a soft touch for the first decent team to present itself in the league race. If the Tigers can stay as close to the pace as they are, with the team they have, then the competition isn't much. It is the sort of a league that an old Yankee team would be leading by 15 games at this point. One of the Connie Mack teams of the 1929-30-31 era would be equally as far in front. There is no club of that stripe in the league.

By this time last year, Newsom had a running start on his 21 victories, but he has been knocked from the box in 11 of his 12 appearances this season. Hank Greenberg, who drove in 154 runs for the Tigers in 1940, was similarly supposed to be indispensable, but what has been happening? The Tigers, with some of the worst pitching in league, and Barney McCosky out of the lineup for a month, have managed to keep winning more than a respectable share of the games. They must be in a cheap field.

It is becoming increasingly evident that the Cleveland Indians, preseason favorites to win the pennant, are no solid ball club. In fact, day by day they are beginning to resemble a Bob Feller A. C. When Feller isn't pitching, the Indians are rarely winning. Al Milnar and Al Smith who were supposed to be some shucks as pitchers for the Indians this season, are just a couple of guys named Al pitching for a team that has a pretty good defense but can't stir up many runs.

It is the sort of a league in which the Red Sox can hover around first place despite pitching that is worse than Washington's, which is the last measure of pitching ignominy. The Red Sox, without Bobby Doerr, one of their best ball players, are making a fight for the lead. They are doing that as one-man ball club, virtually, because Ted Williams' phenomenal hitting has been carrying the team for the past month.

There isn't a club in the league that has even a fair share of the attributes of a stand-out ball team. There isn't a solid club in the circuit. The teams with pitching don't have the power, and vice versa. The Red Sox have power, but little pitching. The Yankees, in the absence of good pitching, are no longer an awesome team. The White Sox have pitching, but they get few runs. The Tigers can show some power, but Manager Del Baker is naming his starting pitcher with a prayer daily.

The team that is probably suffering most from a lack of pitching is Connie Mack's Athletics. They could be the club that could walk away with the pennant if they had the pitching staff. Barring pitching, the A's are perhaps the most solid club in the circuit and probably the most underrated.

It is pretty apparent by now that Frankie Hayes is more than a good catcher. He handles pitchers well, he's a bundle of energy behind the plate, and he can rap that ball. For two years now, the most underrated player in the league seems to have been Dick Siebert, the A's first baseman. Connie Mack acclaims him as such, and with reason. Siebert does everything a first baseman is supposed to do; he's the best first baseman in the league on the difficult first-to-second-to-first double play, and look up his batting average sometime.

But the player who is winning recognition as a full-fledged star faster than any other man in the league is Mack's center fielder—Sam Chapman. Ty Cobb recommended Chapman to the A's while he was still in college, and for a couple of years it appeared that Cobb was over enthusiastic, but day by day Chapman is making Cobb look like a great scout. He is laying off swinging at bad balls, his former weakness, and is beating a tune against the league's pitching. There never was any doubt about his outfielding ability from the first day he donned one of Mack's uniforms.

With such as Wally Moses, Siebert, Bob Johnson, Chapman and Hayes batting in succession, the A's can present as powerful a batting front as any club in the league. Nominally it could carry such weak hitters as Third Baseman Pete Suder and Shortstop Al Brancato, but the A's pitching makes too great a demand on the A's slugging. One standout pitcher could, conceivably, win the pennant this year for a team that finished in the cellar last season. It's that kind of a league, of a league.

The Yankees, despite their presence in the first division within striking distance of the lead, have been floundering all over the place. They still lack a first baseman who can hit, and they have given up on their rookie infield pair of Rizzuto and Priddy. Red Ruffing and Lefty Gomez no longer are pitching often or well, and Charley Keller is a complete flop at bat. Yet this is the sort of a league in which the Yankees, with all their flaws, can threaten the league leaders. There isn't a solid club in it.

Dodgers Bow, But Regain League Lead

Giants Win, 7-5, 12-7; Reds Top Brooklyn, 3-2; Terry Men Take Opener With Rally

By the Associated Press

New York, June 8.—The Giants, though apparently going nowhere themselves, tied the National League race into a bowknot by defeating the St. Louis Cardinals, 7 to 5 and 12 to 7, in a rousing double-header at the Polo Grounds today.

The twin loss dropped the Cards into second place, 8 percentage points behind the Brooklyn Dodgers, who were losing a single game to Cincinnati.

Shut out for eight innings of the first game, the Giants jumped on Howard Krist for five runs in the ninth to tie the count and then won out in the tenth when the veteran Dick Barell slammed a home run with one on. Bartell also drove across two runs with a single in the big ninth inning uprising.

The Giants belted Mort Cooper from the box in the second inning of the nightcap, scoring seven runs and giving Carl Hubbell all the lead he needed to coast in.

Dodgers Bow, 3 to 2, But Regain Lead

By the Associated Press

Brooklyn, June 8.—Shut out for eight innings, the world champion Cincinnati Reds put on one of their typical rallies, scoring three times in the ninth inning to topple the Brooklyn Dodgers, 3-2, today before 21,863.

John Whitlow Wyatt, the league's top-flight hurler, was well on his way to his fifth shutout of the season when the Reds rebounded. Frank McCormick started the last inning by doubling. Mattick fanned but Ernie Lombardi kept the rally alive with a single which scored McCormick. With two out, Eddie Joost doubled to right center for the tying tally and Paul Derringer doubled to right center for the tying tally and Paul Derrin-

Griffs Snap Five-Game Losing Streak

Home Runs Decide Game; Newsom Is Victim of Late Senator Rally

By Shirley Povich
Post Staff Writer

Detroit, June 8.—An excellent report is available on the Nats today. Fantastic as it may seem, they won a ball game. They won it, moreover, in very clever fashion, slugging the daylights out of Detroit pitching while Dutch Leonard held the Tigers in check.

With a 9-to-3 victory, the Nats applied the brakes to a five-game losing streak. They were quite unrecognizable as the inept club that had lost 18 of their last 30 starts. They reared up with what must have been the bitterness in their souls, and slugged seven big runs across the plate in the sixth inning to wipe out a 3-2 Detroit lead.

They unloaded a 14-hit assault against four Detroit pitchers. They knocked young Paul Trout out of the box to the dismay of 16,193 Tiger fans, and when Buck Newsom appeared on the scene as a relief pitcher in that big sixth inning they raked him for the last five of their eight hits of the uproarious session.

Lewis, Vernon Star

Buddy Lewis and Mickey Vernon were the Nats' strong-arm boys. Each of them collected a single, a double and home run. Vernon's homer was the coup de grace. After Lewis' four-base clout had tied the score at 3-3 in the sixth, Vernon jolted one of Trout's pitches far, far into the right field upper deck with Cramer on base to move the winning runs home.

Dutch Leonard was slightly wonderful in that he succeeded in holding the lead, a rare piece of work for a Washington pitcher in these sorry times. Leonard gave up ten hits but one possessed of his lead he was exceedingly chary with his blows. In the last four innings he held the Tigers scoreless and permitted only two hits.

Leonard, in fact, should have held the Tigers to a single run—the first inning run they scored on Gehringer's double and Rip Radcliff's single. The run the Tigers picked up in the fourth inning to tie the score at 2-2 was extremely unorthodox. Higgins, who opened the inning with a double, was about to be stranded on third base when one of Leonard's knuckle balls, a third strike to Croucher, got away from Catcher Jake Early, and Higgins scored.

Another Run Unearned

The third Tiger run was similarly tainted. York opened the inning with a double to center, but that was the only hit of the inning. York went to third when one of Leonard's knucklers dipped crazily

Detroit Options Rookie Harris

Detroit, June 8 (AP).—Robert Ned Harris, 25-year-old Detroit Tiger rookie outfielder, has been optioned to the Buffalo club of the International League, Walter O. Briggs, owner of the Tigers, announced today.

Harris will report to the Eastern club tomorrow in Jersey City. He will be subject to 24-hour recall.

The rookie played left field for the Tigers after Hank Greenberg went to the Army, but was benched when Detroit acquired Rip Radcliff from the St. Louis Browns.

Hunter Title Won in Upset By Need More

By Anne Hagner

Appearing in only her second show after a long and lucrative career at the races, Marrian Curran's Need More took the hunter championship of the Young Democratic Club of Southern Maryland's horse show at Griffith Farms, Md., yesterday afternoon.

With Marrian Curran, jr., aboard, the 6-year-old daughter of Milkman, jumping like a veteran, triumphed in nsufficient classes to outpoint Mr. and Mrs. Donald C. Bradley's Best Time, reserve winner on the basis of conformation after tying with Jackie Warren's David in points earned.

It was Need More, however, who was the surprise of the day. In her previous ring appearance, at the Manor Hunt show last week, she went fairly well but few onlookers suspected that she would show such rapid improvement.

Although still a trifle jittery in hack classes, Curran's mare was well-nigh faultless in trips over the outside course. Her earlier history includes 12 victories in flat races at

Red Sox Beat Chisox Twice, Gain 2d Place

Lefty Grove Bests Ted Lyons in 5-3 Opener; Bosox Limited to 3 Hits but Win Nightcap, 3-0

By the Associated Press

Chicago, June 8.—The Boston Red Sox climbed into second place in the American League today, defeating the Chicago White Sox twice, 5 to 3, in ten innings and 3 to 0, behind the steady pitching of 42-year-old Bob Grove and Heber Newsome.

Grove, in winning the 297th decision of his major league career, scattered nine hits and bested the old Sox veteran, Ted Lyons, whose wildness in the late innings set up the Boston victory. A chilled crowd of 36,859 saw the games.

Jim Foxx opened the tenth with a single, but Jim Tabor forced him at second. Tabor then stole second. Lamar Newsome flied out and Johnny Peacock and Grove drew walks to fill the bases. Dominic DiMaggio then came through with a slashing single to score the two runs which decided the opener. Lyons walked seven batters in the last three frames.

Thornton Lee gave the Red Sox only three hits in the nightcap, but wildness again and sloppy fielding gave Boston its margin. Joe Cronin doubled in the seventh before Lee walked Ted Williams, Foxx and Heber Newsome, forcing in one run. A wild pitch and a fumbled bunt produced the other two runs.

Indians Whip A's, 7-4, 8-6; Gain 2 Games

By the Associated Press

Cleveland, June 8.—The tribe went back into high gear today by taking a double victory and the whole four-game series from the Athletics, 7 to 4 and 8 to 6, with veterans Mel Harder and Clint Brown receiving the credit.

After downing Johnny Babich and two relief hurlers in the first game on eight sparse hits, the Indians were paced by Ken Keltner's homer in the nightcap, in which Phil Marchildon, the loser, lasted for just two innings, six hits and six runs.

Keltner's single, following Lou Boudreau's double in the first, started the second-game scoring. His homer followed Hemsley's triple in the second and gave the Indians the lead they needed. Triples by Walker and Weatherly helped add two more runs in the fourth and fifth.

In the first contest, the Indians scored three times in the second frame on three walks, Hemsley's single and double steal by Mack and Hemsley. Mack's double and Babach's wild pitch added two more in the seventh, and Brancato's error in the ninth let in Trosky, who had

D.C. Ring Body Seeks 'Angel' For Salary Bill

By Al Hailey

The District Boxing Commission this week will launch a series of meetings to find a House of Representatives sponsor for their new salary bill, it was learned last night as members of the commission announced they will draw up a full financial report in the next three weeks.

The bill, which created a storm of criticism upon announcement that it is being drawn up, has as its main provision salaries of $3,000 a year for two members of the three-men commission.

Selection of the sponsor of the bill on the House floor is awaited with keen interest, for the Representative who takes the job is expected to run into stiff opposition.

Several members of the House, currently considering introduction of a resolution calling for a Congressional investigation of boxing nationally, have expressed displeasure with the District boxing body's stand on Arthur Donovan's handling of the recent Joe Louis-Buddy Baer fight. Other House members have expressed outright disgust with the commission's "weak stand" in upholding Donovan after he ignored their summons to testify here.

New Point Added

Thomas P. Morgan, jr., junior member of the commission, said last night that a new point widening the residence limits upon subofficials of the boxing body is being written into the salary bill, now being drawn up by Corporation Counsel Richmond B. Keech.

The provision will nullify present requirements that officials be residents of the District and will extend the residence limits to within

Tunero Meets Sutka In Preliminary to Scott-Pastor Bout

Kid Tunero, outstanding colored Cuban middleweight, who has conquered, among others, two former champions—Ken Overlin and Antol Christoforidis—yesterday was booked to meet Joey Sutka, hard-hitting scrapper, in an eight-round special attraction on the Buddy Scott-Bob Pastor heavyweight show Monday, June 16, at Griffith Stadium.

Tunero, a stablemate of Pastor, formerly held the European title. Sutka in his only appearance here a few months ago was more than holding his own against the Cocoa Kid until he ran into a stream of lefts in the tenth and was knocked out by the Kaed.

Yanks Take Double Bill From Browns

By the Associated Press

St. Louis, June 8.—The New York Yankees bombed the struggling Browns with seven home runs today and took both ends of a twin bill, 9 to 3 and 8 to 3, to move into a tie for third place.

The nightcap was called after seven innings because of darkness.

Joe DiMaggio led the attack with three homers and a double, good for seven runs. Other circuit blows off an assortment of Brownie hurlers were by Red Rolfe, Tommy Henrich, Charley Keller and Joe Gordon.

The Browns got their share of extra base hits too. Altogether 19 of the 35 hits on both sides were for extra bases.

Red Ruffing was in no great trouble winning his sixth verdict in the opener, although he allowed seven solid blows including Harlond Clift's eighth homer. Elden Auker suffered his seventh loss.

The Browns routed Marius Russo in the second game after the Yanks

Army Struggles To Fit Uniform On Young Giant

By the Associated Press

Fort Custer, Mich., June 8—The supply sergeant had to dig out one of the Army's biggest uniforms when Stan McRae, former Michigan State College varsity lineman, reported to this Army reception center as a volunteer.

The 21-year-old giant required covering for 6 feet 3½ inches and 228 pounds. He took size 13½ shoes. He said he wanted to get on the military police force.

McRae, a tackle and end, last fall completed a collegiate career marked by punting ability. He went to the Washington Redskins in the National Professional League's draft.

Brownell and Russell Win Bannockburn Invitation Play

Janssen Brothers Beaten in Finals

Duke U. Grads Finish Fast for 4 and 3 Victory; Hot Golf in Semifinal Round

By Merrell W. Whittlesey

Bobby Brownell and Henry Russell completed a graduation week celebration by winning the Bannockburn two-man Invitation tournament yesterday just three days after winning Duke University diplomas.

Brownell, who is just 22 years old but has been kingpin of the local amateurs around here for some time, and Russell, the Miami, Fla., amateur who won the Southern Conference title last year, defeated Charlottesville's young Janssen brothers, Ben and Pat, 4 and 3, in the 18-hole finals.

One down after six holes to their opponents, six consecutive fours, Brownell and Russell won two of the next three holes to pars and quickly added to their advantage on the back nine as the Virginians three-putted two greens. Brownell ended the battle with a 12-foot birdie putt on the fifteenth green.

Winners Off Form

The winners, who were one under par in the afternoon, an dthe losers, who were three over, were both well off their subpar form of the morning semifinals. Brownell and Russell spotted Volney Burnett and Eddie Bean the first two holes and then drilled home a half-dozen birdies to beat the tournament co-favorites, 3 and 2, despite a three-under par best ball by the losers.

The Janssen brothers, Ben, a 19-year-old University of Virginia sophomore, and Pat, 17-year-old Shady Side Academy graduate who will enter Virginia next year, brushed aside the comedalist team of Earl Skinker and Merrell Whittlesey, 5 and 4, as the visitors chucked nine one-putt greens, including three birdie twos, at the surprise semifinalists.

The unheralded brother team from Charlottesville surprised the final round gallery by leading the heavily favored Brownell-Russell combination for six holes, but they finally lost the remarkable short-game touch which had stuck to them for four rounds, and when they started to lose holes they lost them in a hurry.

Perfect Partners

Brownell and Russell played perfect partners throughout the second annual best-ball affair, which was a definite success and attracted 47 teams in contrast to 29 last year. Brownell, the present Southern Intercollegiate champion, played fine golf all the way through and Russell was a birdie-man and a valuable partner.

In a consolidation handicap tourney yesterday afternoon, Harry Gray and H. E. Davies won low net with 74-14, 60, to the 72-11, 61 by Buster Mrstik and Pat Loughran. All represent the host club.

Club President Jim Hayes presented prizes which included traveling bags and miniatures of the original trophies to both Brownell and Russell. The prize list was one of the best here in years.

Bill Carson, former pro at Anacostia, played the back nine in 29 strokes for an individual 64 and with Jack Pomeroy, pro, posted a best ball 62 to account for three points against Red Marion and Roy Smith.

Entries for the National Public Links Championship close today with Tommy Doerer, jr., at East Potomac, at 6 p. m.

Roland Tabb Wins Hole-in-One Event At Rock Creek

Manager B. Harry Graham's hole-in-one tournament attracted 225 golfers to the old fifth hole of Rock Creek, and Roland Tabb nearly pulled the 10,000 to one shot of an ace tourney when he spanked a short iron 3½ inches from the cup. Twelve-year-old P. J. Meaney, jr., was second, 1 foot 9 inches away while R. W. Hawhurst finished third, 2 feet 1 inch.

Evelyn Lifeshultz won first place among the women entrants with a shot 4 feet 2 inches from the pin with Libby Whitney second and Hope Wilkinson third.

Martin, Miller Net Victors In D. C. Play

Hoya Racqueter Upsets Frank Shore; Barney Welsh and Don Leavens Win

By Jack Munhall

A pair of fuzzy-cheeked young collegians from the rivaling Georgetown and Maryland Universities rapped loudly for attention yesterday in the city of Washington's men's championships at Edgemoor Club.

Don Martin, No. 1 player for the Hoyas, made the most noise when he swept through a pair of matches and advanced all the way into the quarter-finals, while Eddie Miller, the Terps' fine freshman prospect, romped through a second-round match in impressive style.

Martin, as hinted here Sunday morning, accounted for the tournament's first notable upset when he disposed of sixth-seeded Frank Shore of the host club, 7—5, 6—3, after making a near-incredible rally to pull out the first set. The stocky Hilltopper trailed, 5—1 and 40—0, before he braced and ran off six straight games against the tiring Shore who altogether wasted four set points. After that Shore was through, his own lack of stamina being the telling factor.

Miller Beats Waits

Miller, though not yet called upon to face so formidable a foe as Shore, was nevertheless so convincing in his 6—0, 6—0 rout of John Waits that he is now conceded an excellent chance of upsetting seventh seeded Buddy Adair when they meet at 4 today. Miller has lost only three games in his two matches.

Meantime, older and more highly rated players were also bowling along in great style, paced for the second day by Barney Welsh and Don Leavens, who both grabbed off two victories and pranced into the quarter-finals.

Welsh gained a second round default over George Herbert and then trounced young DeWitt Smith, 6—1, 6—1. Leavens, the two-headed, left-handed former southern California ace, who is given a good chance to end Welsh's domination of local tennis, whipped Tom Wadden, 6—1, 6—1, and Austin Rice, 6—0, 6—0. Leavens, steady as a rock, created considerable surprise by the ease with which he handled Rice, who never before has been whitewashed in tournament play, according to veteran observers.

Davie Johnsen, Wins

Davie Johnsen, the defending champion who is just getting on his game again after being laid up for several weeks with a back injury, displayed expected improvement in polishing off Sidney Poretsky in the second round, 6—1, 6—0. Johnsen is seeded third. Fourth-seeded Dick Murphy officially did not see action yesterday, but beat Johnsen in an exhibition match.

Fifth-seeded Hugh Lynch defeated Paul Falconer, 6—2, 6—2, and eighth-seeded Charley Channing eliminated Igor Cassini, 4—6, 6—0, 6—2, but did not show the recent form that caused his being seeded despite the fact that he was unranked in the District.

The doubles competition got underway yesterday with 20 teams entered and Welsh and Lynch were top-seeded, followed by Johnsen and Leavens, Adair and Bob Underwood, and Murphy and Tom Mangan.

Yesterday's results:

Tough Luck Victim for Years, Wood's in the Money Now

Fellow Texans Hail His Victories in Masters' And National Open; Wood to Enter P. G. A.

By Bill Boni

Associated Press Sports Writer

Fort Worth, Tex., June 8.—It is ironic that Craig Wood, the 1941 United States Open golf champion, should have been bounced from one disappointment to another for years only to have things start coming his way in bunches when he is 39.

It is fortunate for him that Craig, at 39, is gifted with the health and the physique to cash in on his late-arriving honors.

He made the first move in that direction today by playing in an exhibition match at Oklahoma City. He is expected to take his new title to Denver for the P. G. A. championship next month (as winner of the Augusta Masters as well as the Open it wouldn't be much of a show without him) and promoters along the summer tournament circuit already are offering him fat guarantees to grace their entry lists.

Two months ago, when Wood won the Masters, there was a huge celebration in honor of the man who finally had crashed through after seeing all the major United States and British golf prizes slip out of his grasp.

Yesterday, when he sank a 30-foot putt on the eighteenth green for his second 70 of the day and a total score of 284, there again wasn't a person in the crowd who wasn't all for him. Those 10,000 Texans had hoped to see a home-bred win this first Open played in their State, but if they couldn't get a Texan there was no one they liked to see win more than Wood.

As one Texas pro said when Wood received the trophy:

"Now we common people finally have a champion."

Wood is an odd person in that he is a difficult character to write about. There is no single outstanding feature in his game, with the possible exception of a frequently miraculous putting touch, and as a personality there also is nothing you really can put your finger on. He is handsome, likable, never growls or complains when things aren't going right; has the perfect, balanced temperament for championship competition—and when you've said that you've said about all there is.

Wood and Nelson Bow To Picard and Hogan

Oklahoma City, June 8 (AP).—Craig Wood, new National Open champion, teamed up with Byron Nelson today to lose an 18-hole match to Henry Picard and Ben Hogan.

Picard and Hogan defeated Wood and Nelson, 3 up, in the concluding day's play of the two-day invitational tournament at the Twin Hills Golf and Country Club.

The second round was postponed from last Sunday because of rain. Wood stepped in to take the place of Sam Snead, who paired with Nelson in the first round May 31.

Picard and Hogan's 3-up victory today, put together with their 3-up win last week, gave them a 6-up margin for the 36 holes.

Palace A. C. 'Iron Men' Win 2 Out of 3

The "iron men" of Palace A. C.'s softball team yesterday fulfilled their promise to play three games in one afternoon and after 4½ hours of play retired from the Palisades Playground field with two victories and one loss to show for their efforts.

Palace defeated Farmers A. C., 9-4, in the opening end of a double-header with that team, but dropped the second game, 6-5, in eight innings. Finding their second wind the Palace players then returned to the field to defeat Griffin Grill, 12-11, on a two-run rally in the last inning.

Pitcher John Gentile was the individual star for Palace, gaining credit for both victories. Byron Thompson was the losing Palace pitcher.

Helen Dettweiler Among Strong Field In Western Open

By International News Service

Cincinnati, June 8.—Making her competitive debut as a professional golfer, Patty Berg, of Minneapolis, tonight was the odds-on favorite to win the Women's Western Open championship.

Play for the Open title, the only one Patty's missed, will begin tomorrow with an 18-hole qualifying round over the tough 5,887-yard course of the Cincinnati Country Club, and will wind up next Saturday with the 36-hole final between the two survivors in the title bracket.

The tournament field includes Mrs. Opal S. Hill, of Kansas City, Open champion in '35 and '36; Helen Dettweiler, of Washington, D. C., 1939 winner; Helen Hicks Harb, of Little Rock, title winner in 1937; Betty Jameson, of San Antonio, present National and Western Closed champion; Mrs. Russell Mann, of Omaha, trans-Mississippi champion; Marion Miley, of Lexington, Ky.; Georgia Tainter, of Fargo, N. Dak., and 17-year-old Jeanne Cline, of Bloomington, Ill.

Perry Routs Budge, Wins Pro Net Title

8,000 Watch Briton Score 6—4, 6—2, 6—3; Skeen 3d, Tilden 4th in Round Robin

By the United Press

New York, June 8.—Fred Perry, national professional singles titleholder, won the world's round-robin tennis crown today, crushing Don Budge in straight sets before 8,000 in Forest Hills stadium.

The former American and English amateur titleholder, now an American citizen, gave a sparkling display of all-around court prowess to steam-roller his California rival, 6—4, 6—2, 6—3.

Perry's victory, the third in as many days, automatically gave him the title. Budge, with a record of two and one, finished runner-up. Dick Skeen, California, placed third and Bill Tilden, 49-year-old Philadelphia veteran, was fourth. Skeen conquered Tilden, 6—1, 7—5, 6—3 for his first victory in three starts. It was Tilden's third straight setback.

Gallery Amazed

Perry's complete mastery of Budge was a source of constant amazement to the gallery. Save for the early stages of each set Perry controlled the play completely, outsteadying his rival from the baseline, outcharging and outthinking him at the net and forcing him into a stream of fatal errors. It was the first clash on grass between the two since they met on the same court in the final of the 1936 national amateur championship, with Perry the winner after five sets.

In each set Budge showed his best in early stages, only to sag badly as the play went on. Perry, in direct contrast, improved constantly in his shot-making and in the final moments of the third set was toying with his rival.

Budge rallied after trailing 5-3 in the first set and held Perry off at two set points to draw up to within 5-4. Perry bore down however and took the next game at love on his own service.

Don's Game Collapses

In the second, Perry went on from one-all and ran through four straight games before Budge could win one.

In the third, after fighting up to three-all, Budge's game collapsed completely and Perry won the next three games, two of them on breaks in service.

In those last three games, Perry allowed his vaunted rival three scant points.

The doubles title went to Perry and Budge who defeated Keith Gledhill and Lester Stoefen, 6-4, 6-4.

Third place honors went to Bruce Barnes and Berkeley Bell who defeated Tilden and Vinnie Richards, 6-3, 6-4.

Carver, N. C. Net Star, Defeats Davis

Atlanta, June 8 (AP).—Zan Carver, University of North Carolina racquet ace, conquered Joe Davis, of Vanderbilt, today, 6-3, 3-6, 8-6, in finals of the third district test for berths in the National Intercollegiate Tennis Tournament at Philadelphia June 23.

On the Line

With CONSIDINE

Fort Worth, Tex., June 8.—You matrons and heftier mademoiselles who are preys of the great American girdle, and resent same should take heart and courage from the girdled stoicism of the new Open golf champion of the United States.

CONSIDINE

Craig Wood won the title yesterday wrapped in a girdle of such Spartan severity that it was mostly made of steel, not whalebone stays, and canvas. He owes his success to it.

It took him 15 minutes to get into it, before he went out to play each round of the back-breaking golf. And the presentation-of-the-cup ceremonies, after he won the tournament, had to be held up for 20 minutes while Craig went through the anguish of shucking himself out of the awful thing—with all the grimaces and groans and eventual bliss of a 250 pound operatic soprano liberating her compressed heft from the bondage imposed on her by a manager who booked her to play the role of the consumptive Mimi.

We had a drink with Craig after the mob had thinned out, and after he had called his wife on the phone in New York, warded off the touch artists and agreed to indorse a few things. He told us about the girdle. Here are some of the things he said:

"They'll put my name in the record books, but the fellow who won the Open is named Jules Gordon. He's a New York doctor. He rigged me up in that brace, and suggested that I wear one of those wide polo belts when I'm not wearing the girdle. I wouldn't even have come down here to play in the thing, if it hadn't been for Gordon.

"I hurt my back in a funny way. I was shaving myself one morning when the razor suddenly dropped out of my hands. I stooped over to pick it up and just as I did I sneezed. Well I just couldn't get up. I lay there 20 minutes before I could crawl to a phone and get help.

"Well, that was the day I was supposed to play in the Goodall Tournament. That was out of course. I got to Gordon's the next day and he worked on me for a week, gave me a lot of diathermy treatments, got me into my rig and made me sleep with a thick plank under my mattress for nine nights.

"I came here strictly against my better judgment," the good-natured blond guy said. "I told my club members at Winged Foot not to bet on me, before I left. I honestly didn't think I'd have a prayer. Looked like I was right, too. Because I started off with a seven on the first hole of the tournament. But when I finished that day with a 73, and then shot that 71 in the rain on Friday, I knew I had a look-in. Funny thing, though. Coming down the home stretch in the final round I thought it was Bulla I had to beat, not Denny Shute. Poor Denny. . . ."

Among the thousands who followed Craig around the Colonial Course to victory was Bobby Jones. Craig, sitting in the bar, happier than he had ever been in his life, remembered now the time back in 1926 that Jones had been nice to him. "He did a wonderful thing for me, the day he won the Open that year. There were a million people on his neck, trying to get to him. I tracked him to his hotel and called him on the house phone and explained that I was a punk pro from a club in Louisville, that he wouldn't know me if he saw me and that I'd appreciate it a lot if he'd let me come up to see him. Well, Bob said 'come right up,' and I suppose that was one of the biggest thrills I ever had."

There were many other things for Craig to do, so after a while he picked up his bag, containing the fabulous girdle, and started out. But not before bestowing one last compliment on it. "It makes me feel like a parachutist . . . and I'm still up in the clouds," he beamed as he went out to the back-slapping crowd that was waiting for him.

Whirlaway Aims to Top Seabiscuit's Money Winning Mark

Calumet Star Faces Busy Program

Colt Is Eligible For Remaining Big 3-Year-Old Races; Dwyer Next Stake

By Sid Feder

Associated Press Staff Writer

New York, June 8.—Whirlaway locked his triple crown in the safe with the rest of the family jewels today and looked ahead to a busy summer and winter campaign aimed at erasing Seabiscuit's all-time money winning record, if his four-leaf clover keeps working.

BEN JONES

In mopping up the big three stakes of the three-year old division, topping it off with an exercise gallop in the Belmont Stakes yesterday, Warren Wright's charging chestnut demonstrated to the complete satisfaction of himself and Trainer Ben Jones that hard work can't do anything wrong to him that some fresh grass and a bucket of oats can't cure.

So, rather than take a holiday and possibly lose his form, the Kentucky Cannonball will go after the rest of the top three-year old stakes between now and this fall. He may begin this campaign in the Dwyer and Shelvin Stakes at Aqueduct's meeting, beginning tomorrow, and follow those up with the Arlington Classic, the American Derby at Washington Park, the historic Travers at Saratoga and the Lawrence Realization and Jockey Club Gold Cup at Belmont's fall meeting.

"If he remains sound and we keep on being lucky," Trainer Jones predicted, "he should pick up a little over $100,000 in those races, provided he runs in all of them."

Would Race in California

This, added to the $39,770 he pocketed yesterday, and the $196,341 he had in the bank before that, would boost Whirlaway's earnings to somewhere over $340,000. In that case, there's a very good chance he'll take a ride to California then to shoot at the big pot in the $100,000 Santa Anita Handicap next March. And if he can pick that one up, he'll have Seabiscuit's $437,730 all-time high nailed to the mast.

At the moment, there's no reason to believe Blenheim's boy won't remain sound. And there's even less reason to believe there's a 3-year-old lurking in some one's barn who can pop out and beat him on any given afternoon. In fact, the 3-year-old division is so convinced that only three were even willing to run against him yesterday. So, instead of running his usual waiting race, Whirly crossed all hands by taking to the front, and he still won by three lengths as Robert Morris, Yankee Chance and Itabo chased him home in that order. In winning this way, he made it appear more than ever that any 3-year-old who can catch him is strictly a myth.

Eligible for Dwyer Stakes

Trainer Jones hadn't decided on the exact program, pending a conference with Owner Wright, who had to miss the "coronation" of the Derby-Preakness winner in the Belmont as the fifth triple crown winner in racing history. Wright was in Denver attending Warren, Jr.'s college graduation.

However, Whirly is eligible for the Dwyer, worth about $10,000. Although he'd have to spot some of the other 3-year-olds as much as 10 pounds in this affair, there is a growing conviction he can beat any of them with a milk wagon hitched on behind him. So Jones wouldn't mind going in that one as the next stop of the chestnut special's grand tour.

'Grudge' Game At D.C. Softball Park Tonight

The "grudge" softball game of the year, with undisputed possession of the Capital City Softball League lead awaiting the winner, will be unfolded tonight at 8 p. m. at Washington Softball Stadium when Yellow Cab and Kavakos Grill tens come to grips.

The Cabbies, winners of five of six league tilts, and Kavakos, with three triumphs against a single loss, are rivals of old standing. Long before members of both teams reached the stage of uniformed teams, they were heated sports rivals hailing from Rosedale and Sherwood playgrounds.

Once before these two rivals met this year, clashing last month on the opening night of the season, when "Lefty" Horejsi hurled his Kavakos mates to a 12-7 triumph over "Bump" Simonds and the Cabmen.

In the second half of the doubleheader the undefeated Greenbelt tossers will take on Lansburgh's in a National Night League game at 9:15 p. m. Orin Shanks, who has been giving every indication of late that he has recaptured his old effectiveness of several years back, will attempt to snap the Greenies' unbeaten string.

Village Motors Wins Over Bluejays, 5-2

Bryantown, Md., June 8.—Don Goodman's Village Motors of the Washington-Virginia League, defeated the Bluejays here today, 5 to 2. It was the Motor team's sixth victory in a row.

Red Nelson of the winners, limited the Bluejays to five hits while striking out eight.

Senate Meets Manhattan in Double-Header

Senate Beer, currently riding along in first place of the Merchants Night Softball League, faces one of the hardest hitting crews in the District tonight in Ballston Stadium when it squares off with fourth-place Manhattan Auto and Radio in the first game of a league double-header starting at 7:45.

Manhattan, off to a miserable start when its pitching collapsed, has rounded into form and is confident of surprising the haughty Beermen. Last Friday Manhattan turned back Plaza Wine & Liquor, upset conquerors of Senate, lambasting Roger Sawtell for 11 runs. In beating Senate, Sawtell gave up only two runs and five hits. Senate will be taking no chances with Manhattan, however, and Abe Rosenfield will be on the mound to tame the Radiomen.

In the first game, Plaza, tied with Manhattan in fourth place, engages Standard Linen, in a game that looms as a pitching duel between Sawtell and Benny Rubin. Standard, in second place, will be seeking their fifth victory of the campaign and a chance for a first-place tie, while a victory for Plaza means third place. Action starts promptly at 9:15.

Braves Earn Even Break With Chicubs

By the Associated Press

Boston, June 8.—Victims of two successive 5-1 decisions at the hands of the Chicago Cubs, the Boston Braves shook off their batting lethargy in the nightcap of today's doubleheader to shell three Brun hurlers for a 13-1 triumph before more than 16,000.

Larry French, Paul Erickson and Wallington Quinn, who was making his mound debut in professional ball, were the victims as the dormant Boston bats came to life with six and four-run clusters in second and sixth innings to account for 10 of the 13 tallies.

Bespectacled Bill Lee performed for the Cubs in the opener and duplicated exactly the Saturday feat of Claude Passeau in holding the Braves to five hits while his teammates were collecting the same number of runs to a lone counter for Boston.

Chicago opened the scoring in the first with a single by Stan Hack and a double by Bob Sturgeon, adding a pair in the third on singles by Sturgeon and Bill Nickolson and a double by Don Dallessandro. Two unearned tallies crossed the plate in the fifth. Singles by Ray Berres and Sibby Sisti and an infield roller produced the lone Boston score.

The Braves went right to work on starter Larry French in the nightcap and drove him to cover in the six-run second, in which ten men came to bat. Paul Erickson was little better but Quinn who was charged with two cheap runs in the seventh, did pretty well in his initial mound appearance. He came up from Los Angeles as a first baseman.

Bill Nicholson's homer over the distant right center field wall saved the Cubs from a whitewash in the eighth. Gene Moore had belted one to the same area for the Braves in the third.

Officials Approve Lighting System At West Lanham

General Manager Edward L. Mahoney personally turned on the lights last night as he introduced the new setup that is to illuminate the $50,000 West Lanham (Md.) Speedway, which opens its gates to midget automobile racing a week from tomorrow night, June 17.

Walter Stebbins, auto racing director of the new Lanham track, who has just returned from a week-end visit to New York, where he attended the midget races at the Cedarhurst (Long Island) Speedway last Saturday night, was present for the test and pronounced the new lighting system an unqualified success.

Stebbins also was pleased with the enthusiastic reception tendered the new speedway throughout the American Racing Drivers Club, the fastest circuit in the country.

Standard Oil Holds Secret Nazi Patents

Copyright by New York Tribune, Inc.

New York, June 8.—The Standard Oil Co of New Jersey, issued today a 2,500-word statement, entitled "Our Business With Germany." It details the story of hydrogenation, the German-invented process to make synthetic gasoline, and recounts the involved patent-trading with German companies in progress around the world for nearly 15 years.

Hydrogenation is what might be called a wonder process. By it, gasoline is made from coal. It is of great importance in oil refineries and has tremendous implications in the great fields of chemistry. In the United States, it is used, in the manufacture of high-quality aviation gasoline.

Standard Oil, in today's historical study, narrates its dealings, past and present, with I. G. Farbenindustrie, the world-potent German chemical trust.

Standard Oil is 100 per cent owner of Standard-I. G. Company (now the Standard Catalytic Company), holder of all hydrogenation patent rights for the world outside of Germany. I. G. originally owned 20 per cent but has been bought out since the start of the present war.

Standard Oil is 100 per cent owner of Jasco, Inc., which was originally organized to handle the problems of chemical products from oil and gas, chiefly synthetic rubber. Jasco now holds exclusive patent rights for the United States, Britain and France. I. G. formerly owned half of Jasco but likewise was bought out.

International Hydrogenation Patents Company, which controls hydrogenation patent rights outside the United States, is jointly owned by Standard Oil and Royal Dutch Shell. Headquarters were moved to Curacao before Hitler invaded the Low Countries but Germany does not recognize this action, maintaining that I. H. P.'s main office is in The Hague, "where a German commissar is now administering its affairs."

Standard Oil has had "virtually no control over the handling" of its European properties for the last 18 months and reports that it is keeping in the closest voluntary touch with the State Department concerning the world's danger zones.

All exchange of technical information between Standard Oil and I. G. has stopped since the war began. I. G.'s ownership of Standard Oil stock is now six-tenths of 1 per cent of all shares outstanding.

Missions Society Voices Tributes To Eight Who Died

More than 400 delegates to the annual convention of the Women's General Missionary Society, United Presbyterian Church, paid tribute yesterday to eight missionaries who died in service during the last year.

Mrs. Ida B. Little, young women's secretary of the general board, led eulogies to the late Miss Mary A. Lawrence, Miss Phandora Simpson, Professor Wallace J. Downs and Dr. M. M. Brown, all of India; Miss Anna M. McConaughey, Miss Isabel Hosack and Dr. William H. Reed, of Egypt, and the Rev. R. Galley Simpson, missionary to the Indians at Tama, Iowa.

The services were held at convention headquarters, Wallace Memorial United Presbyterian Church, where last night addresses were delivered by missionaries from India, Ethiopia, Egypt and other lands. Delegates attended morning services at River Road and Wallace Memorial churches. The convention runs through tomorrow.

Contract Bridge

A weak opening and a daredevil partner were responsible for arriving at an impossible grand-slam made contract on the deal shown in today's box. S. S. had to guess the play rather well to keep from going set more than one. This is what he says:

"The hand has to be carefully played and correctly guessed as to spades to make even six. My partner claimed that my bid was inexcusably light, but it seemed to me a permissible opening, not vulnerable, with pass on my right. Distributionally, the hand has great possibilities in the major suits. After jumping my spades, partner insisted I should have signed on with three no trump rather than four spades, but I cannot agree with this in view of my singleton ace of clubs. After he started Blackwood, he could easily have found out that I had no kings at all instead of jumping right to seven spades. He assumed the king for my opening bid, but he could have asked me anyway.

"I made six by guessing the king, lack of spades on my right and a singleton on my left. After taking the first round of hearts, I laid down the ace of clubs and entered dummy with the ace of spades. I was lucky to find the clubs divided in such a way that I could get rid of three hearts in my own hand and give away only one trump trick.

"Am I right in thinking that the bidding should conservatively have stopped at four spades, and that even a small slam was a gamble?"

S. S. is right, but that opening bid of his was light.

We didn't know it until just now ourselves, but it's a pretty impressive bit of information.

All this while a man who appears regularly on C. B. S.'s "Invitation to Learning" over WJSV Tuesday nights, who reviews books for The Post and who's a Washington lawyer has been Uncle Sam's literary and art censor.

It's his job to inspect all books and objects of art collected by customs officials, to get rid of them if they strike him as being out of bounds or to approve them and allow their entry.

He's been doing it for six years now, along with his radio job, the writing of innumerable book reviews, articles for any number of magazines and, so help us, a couple of heavy books besides. What happens in his spare time we don't know.

Anyhow, he's Huntington Cairns, assistant general counsel for the United States Treasury Department, and in those six years not one of his rulings on the books and thing's we've mentioned has been reversed by the courts.

We said we didn't know what he did with his spare time, but since then we've found out. It's an adaptation of the postman's holiday gag. He also reads books for fun. He's got a library of 25,000 volumes. He's also vice president of the American Go Association—Go being a Chinese military game which is about ten times as complicated as chess.

G.W. Graduates Urged to Help 'Awaken' U. S.

Three hundred and fifty graduating seniors of George Washington University yesterday afternoon were urged to "help awaken the United States from its complacency" by the Right Rev. James E. Freeman, Bishop of Washington, at baccalaureate services at Washington Cathedral.

Before an audience of 1,000 Bishop Freeman told the seniors that "your greatest trust is with the Government of the United States, that Government which has given you everything you have, the greatest Government in the world."

Bishop Freeman, speaking on "Guard That Which Is Committed to Thy Trust," told the seniors that while the morale in Army camps is excellent, "never in the history of the country has the moral standard of living been lower than it is today.

"I am not afraid nor worried about Hitler or his cohorts, but about that which is in the confines of the United States. The country is in a state of civil war," the Bishop said.

Recipient of an honorary degree from George Washington, Bishop Freeman said that in 45 years of making baccalaureate addresses he had never spoken in the face of such difficult conditions as exist today. It is the task of young people, he said, to "rebuke the work of my generation."

The Bishop, however, spoke with "reasonable optimism," pointing out that in time of crisis "there is opportunity for an awakening of religion."

Tunney to Call 'Pro-American' Rally of Youth

Attempts to form a national federation of all independent youth groups loyal to American democracy will be made by Gene Tunney, chairman, National Foundation for American Youth, at a "pro-American youth rally" to be held in New York in September, it was announced yesterday.

Tunney, now a Naval lieutenant commander, said "the existing national emergency necessitates united action in support of our defense program of the several hundred anti-ism groups that have sprung up following our exposure of the Communist-controlled American Youth Congress."

All youth groups "loyal to the American Government and opposed to communism, fascism and nazism will be eligible to send delegates to the national youth rally, which will discuss youth's role in the present world crisis and formulate a program of action to utilize fully youth's energies in defense of democracy," he stated.

Pageants Mark Children's Day In D.C. Churches

The younger generation had its "inning" yesterday, as Washington churches marked Children's Day with pageantry and song. Some congregations will hold the observance next Sunday.

Members of the kindergarten and nursery groups at Eastern Presbyterian Church staged a colorful nature pageant at the combined church school and morning worship service. Majorie Samperton and Thomas Davis had the leading roles.

Church school scholars of Mount Pleasant Congregational Church put on a pageant in a garden setting. Entitled "That Joy May Be." It was directed by Miss Evelyn A. Albers, religious education director.

Participating in Douglas Memorial Methodist Church's Children's Day celebration were Jean Goodrich, Nancy Hill and Donald Gross. Among those in charge were Mrs. Blanche Halla and Mrs. Frieda Stine.

Annual proficiency awards were given at several church school assemblies.

Soldier, Dancee Make Loving Pose for Press Permanent

A romance that began March 8 under the glare of a news photographer's flash-bulb at Arlington Cantonment yesterday blossomed in the marriage of Private Ausborne Kelley and Marguerite Heckman.

After their marriage in the rectory of the St. Charles Catholic Church, Arlington, the couple recalled how an Associated Press photographer unwittingly started their romance when he asked them to pose for a picture at a dance at the Arlington Army post the night of March 8. The Washington Post carried their picture the next day.

Marguerite, a typist at the FBI, was a draftette at the dance along with hundreds of other girls employed in the Government service. The photographer assigned to cover the function singled her and Ausborne out for a picture.

He asked the couple, strangers until then, to pose as if they were "sitting one out" and to look into one another's eyes. They followed instructions to the letter, and—presto—it was love at first sight.

"We started having dates right away," Private Kelley said. "And when did I propose? Oh, in about a month."

The marriage was performed by the Rev. R. Dixon Beattie, assistant pastor of St. Charles. Corpl. Jack Keatts, also attached to the Twelfth Infantry at the Arlington Cantonment, was best man. The bride was attended by a sister, Grace Heckman, and Eleanor Maier, both of New York City.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Christian Heckman, of New York City. Since she obtained her job with the FBI, about six months ago, she has been living with her cousin, Mrs. Louis Dacanto, and her husband, 913 South Ode Street, Arlington.
